It's a big world . . . Where do we go from here?

While traveling down life's road, one will encounter many obstacles. These walls of decision are not easily overcome, but some how in the process of becoming young adults we have learned to cope and deal with them. Now, as Seniors in high school, we are left with a major dilemma; what do we do with our lives? Take the time to look around you; the answer's not far.

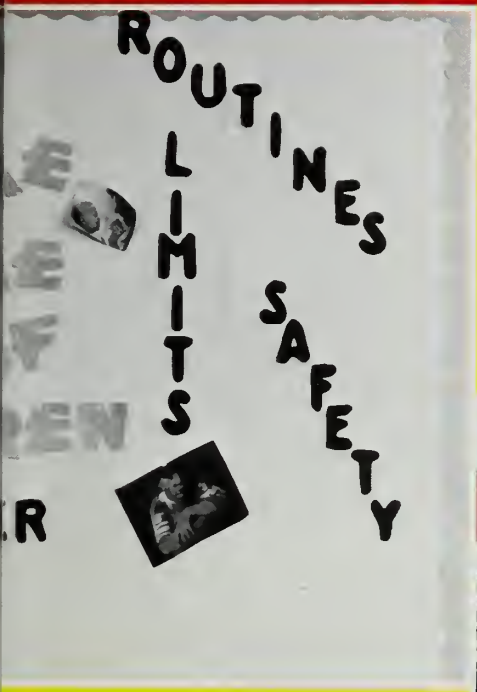
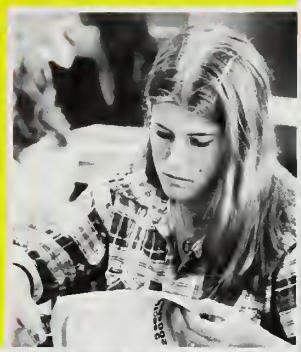
What about

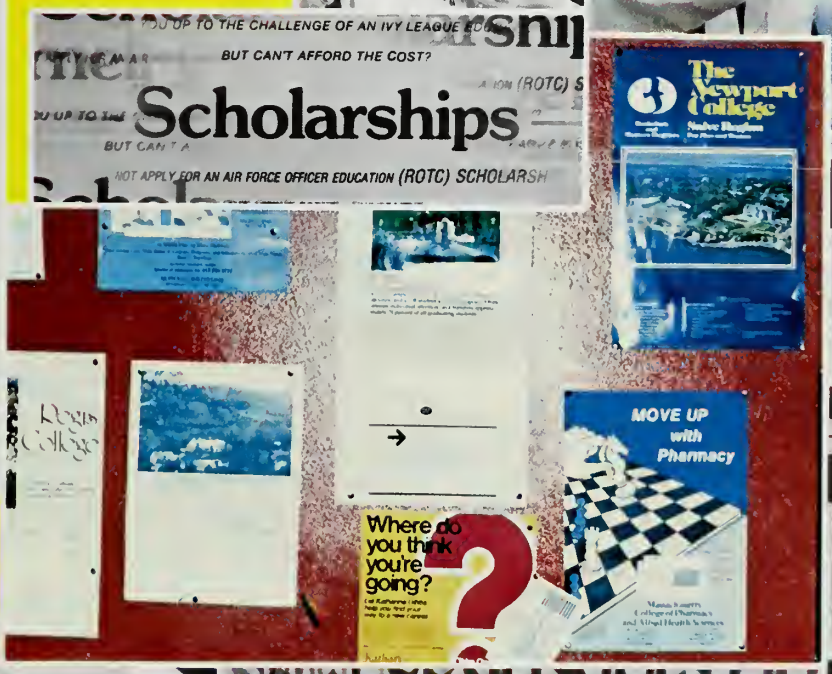
The college life! Four more years of security and a relatively easy life, all depending on the school one chooses. It will be a time to test one's maturity to see if he can pull his life together and set goals for himself. But while college is learning, it is also night life, parties and good friends. After hours of endless studying, one will always have the opportunity to unwind and relax and enjoy the good life.

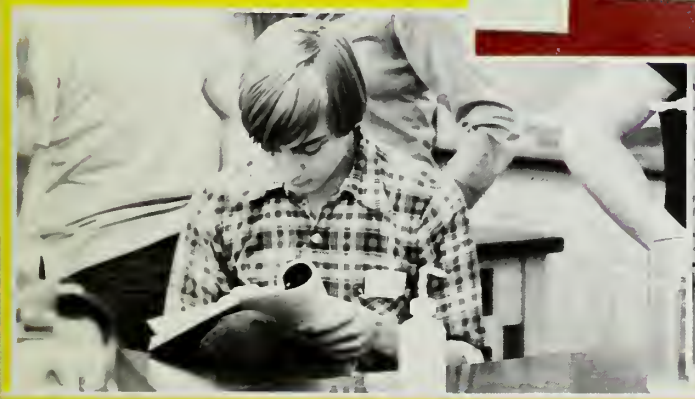
but then if you're so smart tell me

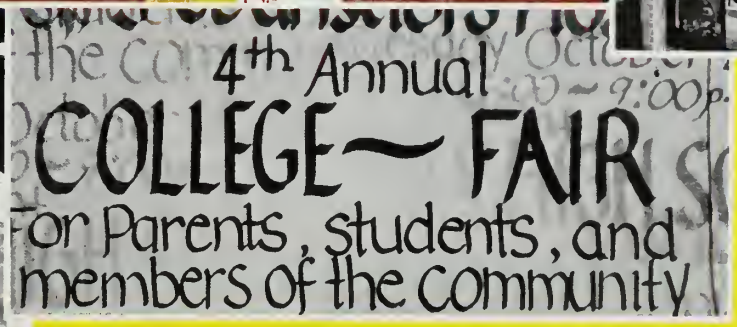
Working after high school could be the thing to do. It would mean sticking around town and living a carefree life, perhaps getting an apartment and testing life's ups and downs. But then again, a secure life must be in the making and eventually one will have to settle down to a career. The opportunities are there however, and depending upon one's personal talents and skills a working life could prove rewarding.











why are you still so afraid? . . . Billy Joel

A President is elected . . .

While we were filling out college applications, making appointments at the career center and working on those never-ending term papers, American voters went to the polls and made a decision which would certainly affect our lives in the 1980's.

In a landslide, Ronald Reagan was elected the fortieth President of the United States. The political center of the nation had shifted to the right.

In many ways it was a strange election. Most people found themselves voting out of a sense of frustration and anger. There seemed to be little real enthusiasm for any of the candidates. A vote for Reagan was a vote against Carter; a Carter vote was an anti-Reagan vote; and a vote for John Anderson was a vote against the two-party system itself. If given the opportunity, many people expressed the desire to vote for none of the above!!

The economy was the big issue. Runaway inflation and sky-high interest rates helped to drive Jimmy Carter from office. Casting a shadow over the election was the continued imprisonment after one year of fifty-two American hostages in Iran. Americans were confused by the nation's changing role in the world and searched to regain a vision of a simpler America that seemed to have passed with time. Ronald Reagan promised a return to a simpler time, and in so doing, captured the mood of a majority of the American people.

Whether such a return is possible, only time will tell. But the outcome of the election of 1980 will certainly have a far-reaching influence in shaping the world we are about to enter.

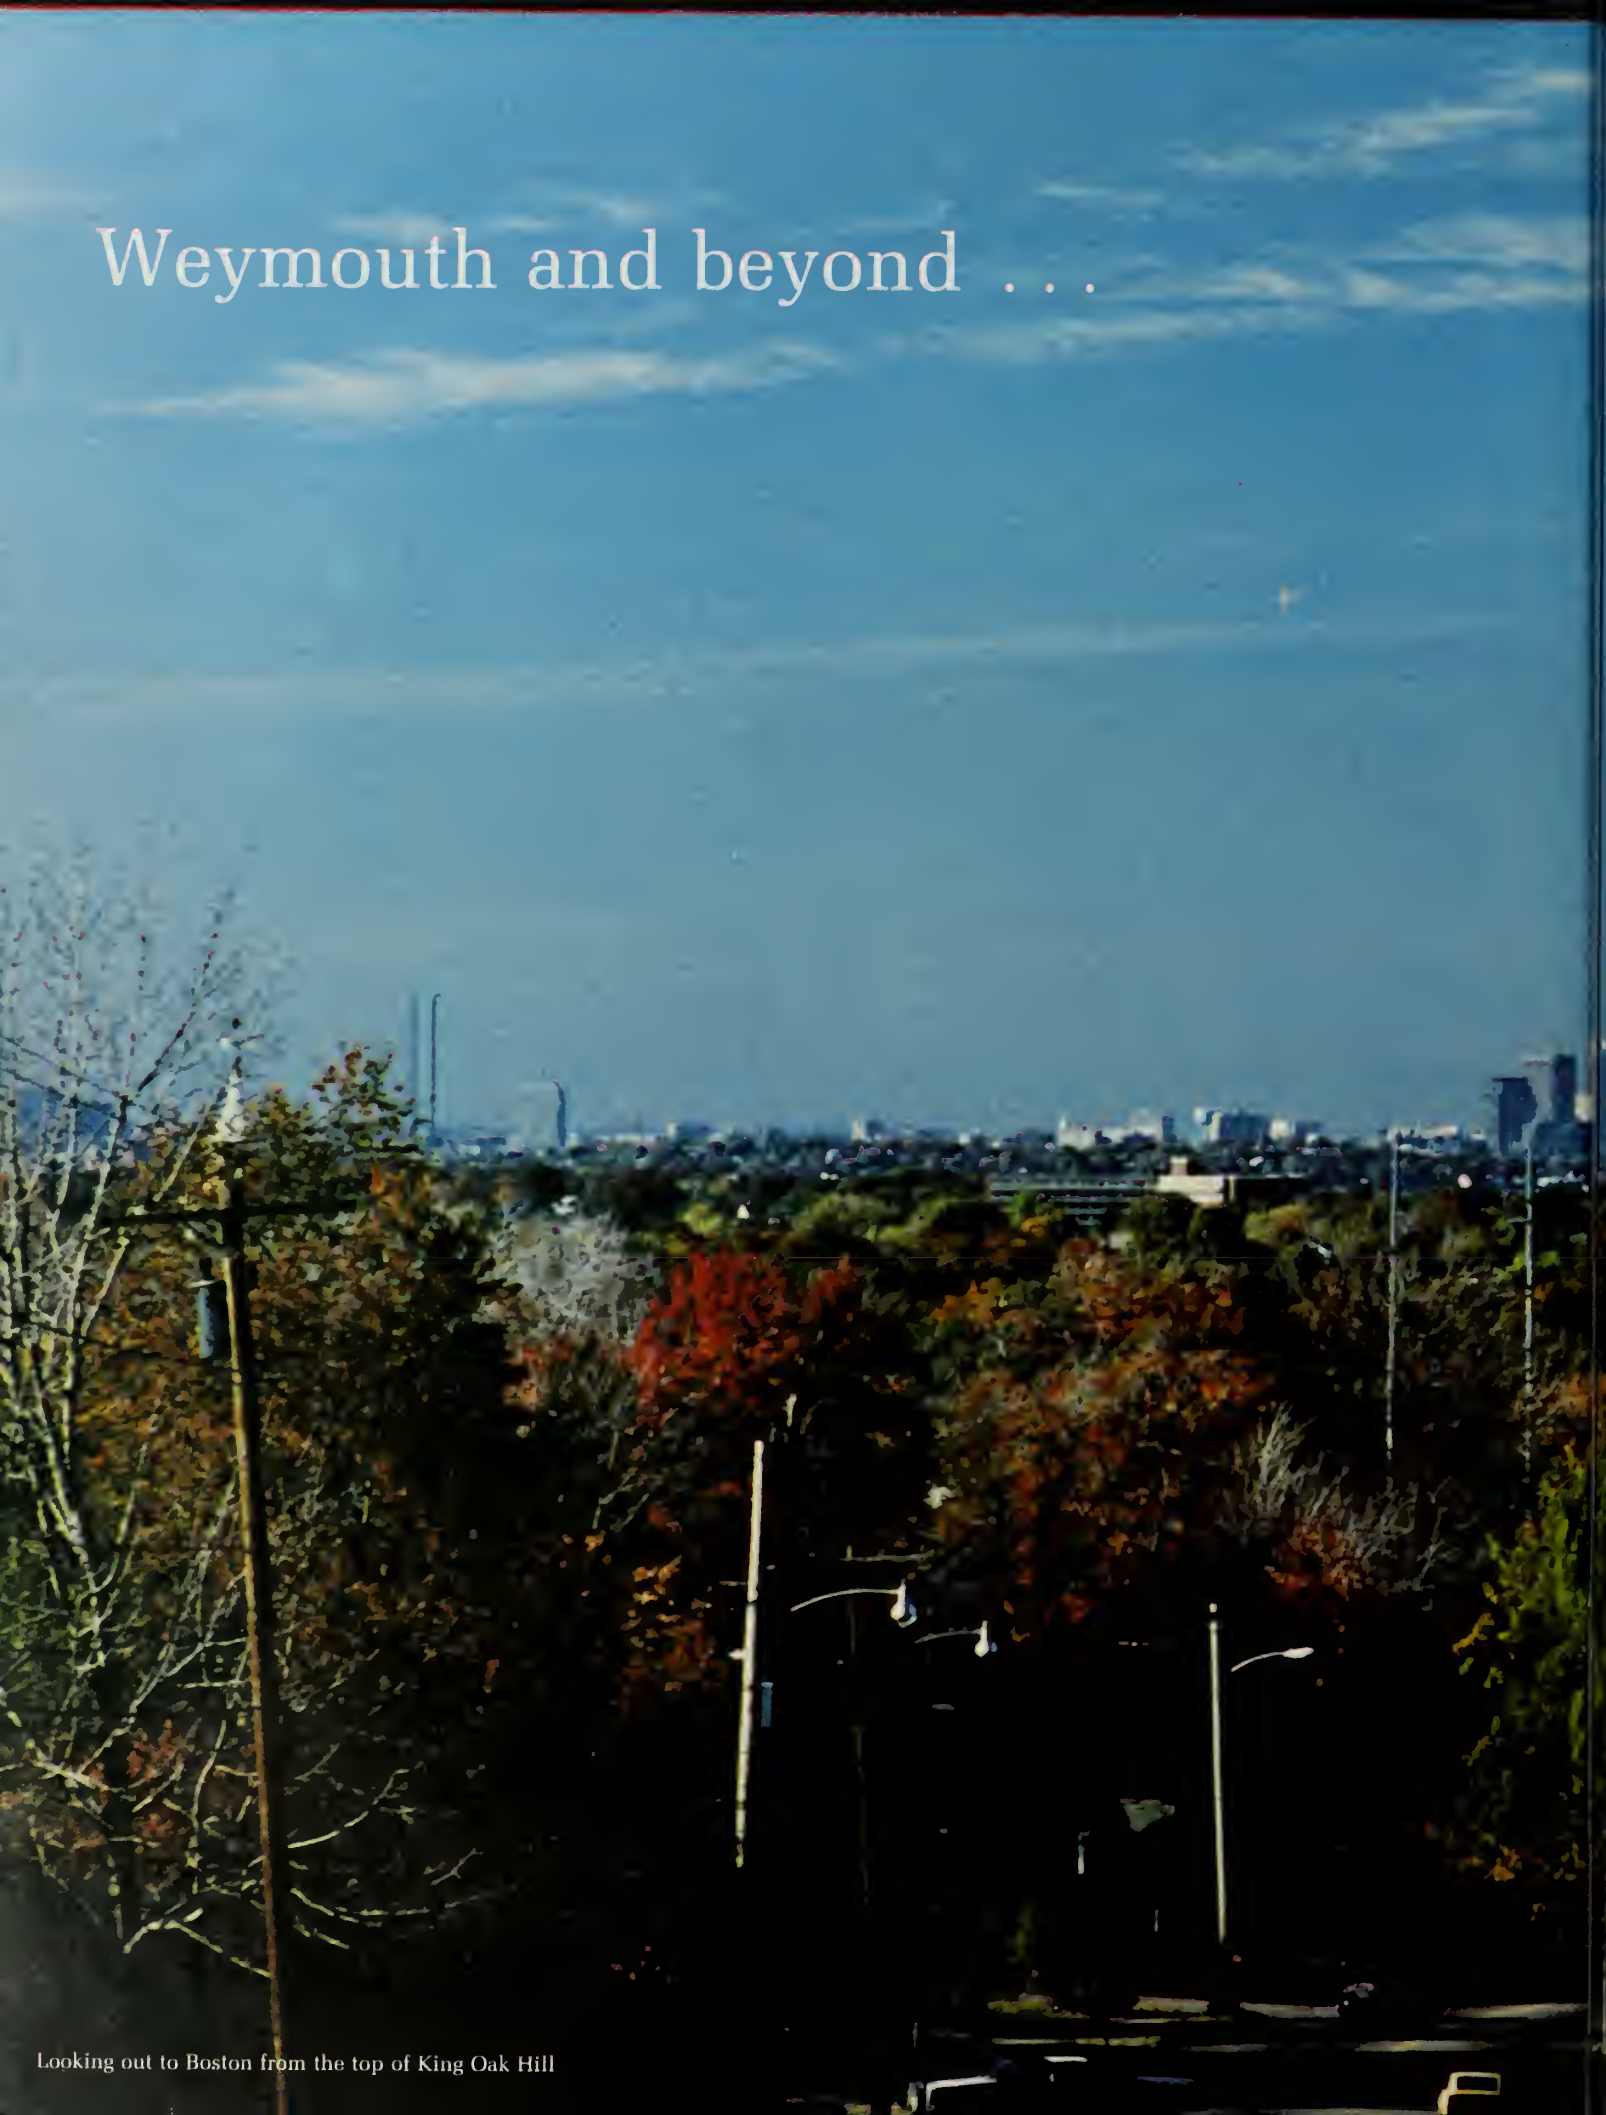
Weymouth and beyond . . .



Looking out to Boston from the top of King Oak Hill

Weymouth is . . .

— Levis, workboots and maroon jackets
— the epitome of mediocrity
— a beginning, a middle and an end
— the middle road between a city and a town
— a Xerox machine copying time
— a quaint hometown that will never grow old or die
— MacDonald's and Thackery's
— a town set on conformity
— a town that allows us all to grow as individuals
— many different things to many people

The highway is just a two lane road connecting either way I have seen enough of this end for awhile and I have to go the distance until I know I've seen a change I have to know the feel of every mile . . .

Jonathan Edwards

I have my home, my life, my love
Why should I take a step beyond when I have found contentment here?

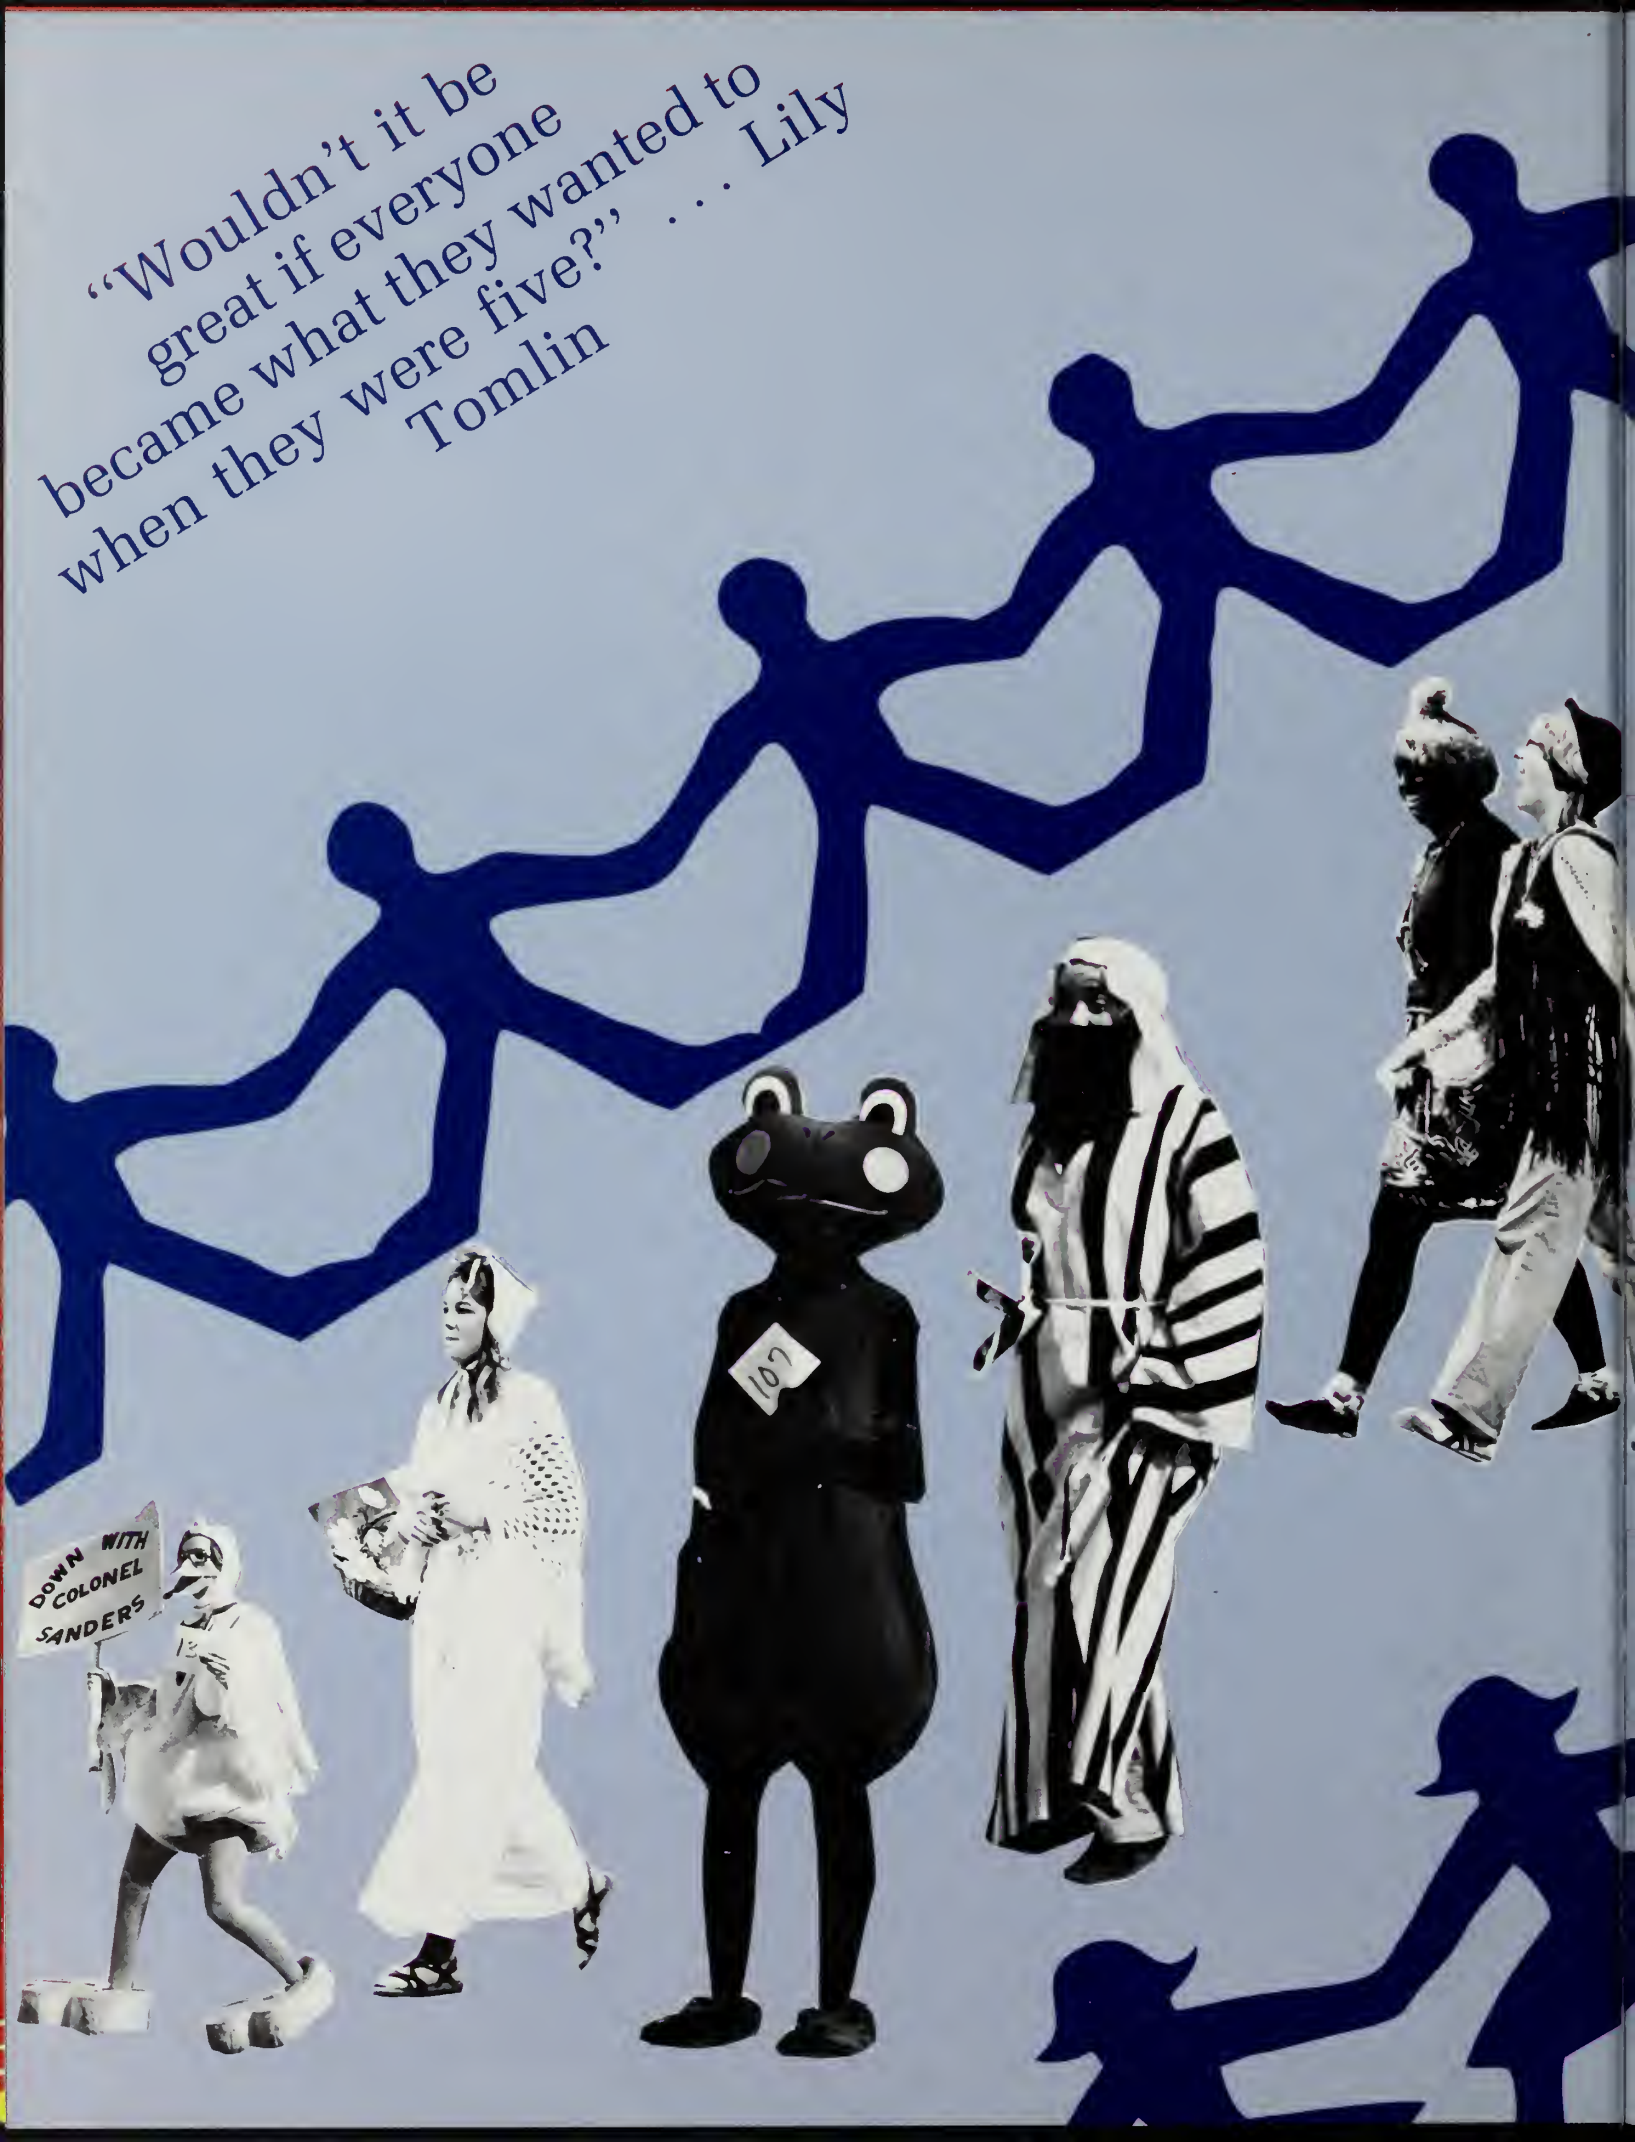
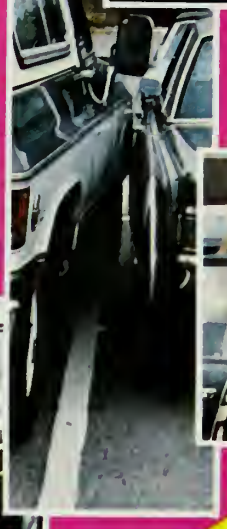
"Wouldn't it be great if everyone became what they wanted to when they were five?" ... Lily Tomlin



The world would be filled with tough-as-leather cowboys who would roam the west atop their trusted steeds, intrepid firefighters equipped with hoses and portable hydrants, and dedicated teachers, devoted to their students. Heroes such as Batman and Captain America would frequent every street corner, ready to rescue beautiful flaxen-haired princesses from crafty villians. The galaxies would be explored by adventurous astronauts and the seven seas would be navigated by courageous sea captains. We would never want for amusement; there would be plenty of movie stars, crayola artists and gallant sports heroes. Efficient doctors and nurses in starched white uniforms would tend to the crime fighters who may have been injured while saving graceful tu-tu-clad ballerinas from ferocious fire-breathing dragons. Of course there would be no businessmen, politicians or scientists. (They were not invented in those days.) Well, on Halloween, we all have the opportunity to relive our childhood fantasies . . . to retain both the sanity of adulthood as well as the creativity of childhood.

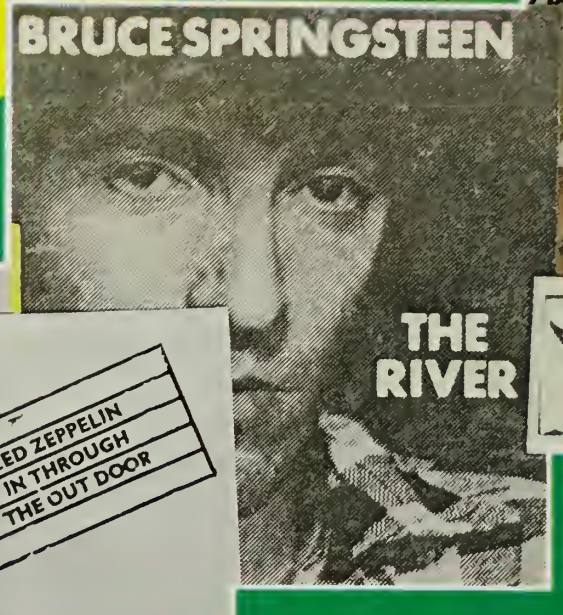
Cars

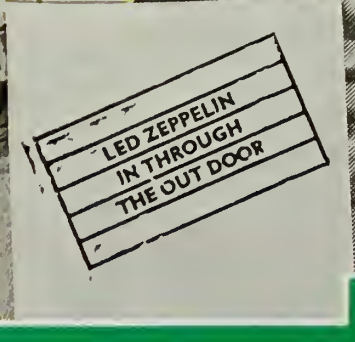


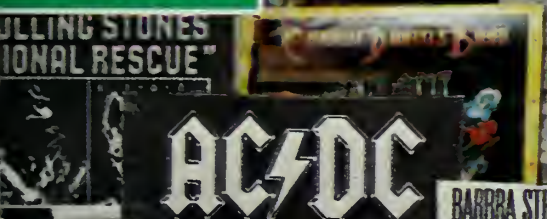
Even with the exorbitant price of gasoline, the gym parking area overflowed every morning with an abundance of motor vehicles. To some the car became an intricate part of their life, a thing to spend almost all of their extra time and money on. To others the car was just the most convenient way of getting around. In many cases our cars reflected our personalities.

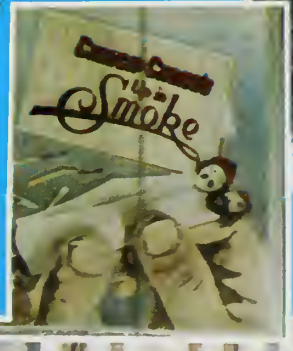
Fashions

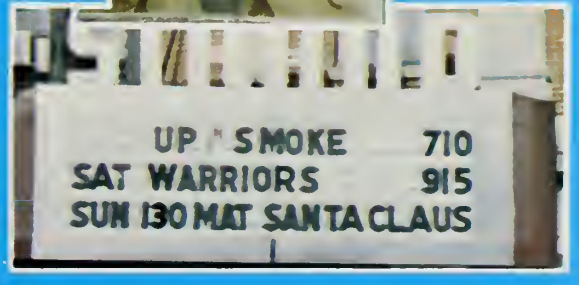
The fashions of the day were far from unique. The average Weymouth boy could be found in a pair of Levi's and workboots; the average girl in a pair of designer jeans. Some variations could be found in our cool leathers and dungaree coats, or the always infamous prep look. And surely we must remember the slowly declining jock or disco look: a pair of Converse sneakers, Levi's and an ironed and pressed T-shirt.











Hours of enjoyment were spent while spinning the disk or turning the dial, but either way our music was a part of us. It reflected our changing moods and relaxed us or psyched us up, but either way it always made us feel good.

The time was the 80's, the beginning of a new decade and a new wave of music. But rock 'n roll could not be denied it's place as it continued to express our feelings.

A Saturday night and no place to go! Well there are always the three faithfuls, The Cameo, The Loring or The Strand. This was the place to go to see a good flick at a reasonable price. Movie going was a change of pace enjoyed by everyone. Well maybe not so much enjoyed, as frightened by. It seemed that everytime we went to the movies we saw such films as Dressed To Kill and Friday the 13th. But we also laughed at The Stunt Man and Private Benjamin, as we were moved by Ordinary People and Kramer vs. Kramer.

A senior is . . .

. . . the student who brings in a note saying he/she was sick on "Senior Skip Day" and then is sent to Mr. Concannon because he/she has a sunburn.

. . . the student who takes an entire day to get ready for the prom and then is late.

. . . the student with a spagetti stained mouth listening to Mr. Ghiorse wish the class good luck.

. . . the student who dresses proudly in his school colors on a certain Saturday in June.

. . . the student who holds a scroll of paper in his/her hand and with tears in his/her eyes and asks "Where did all the time go?"

. . . the students who came in as groups and leave alone knowing the support that was given to them was only the beginning.

. . . the student who walks through the halls with an air of dignity.

. . . the student who is always selling something to the underclassmen and faculty to lower his/her class dues.

. . . the student who finally gets to take psychology and then flunks it.

. . . the student who comes to class exhausted because he/she worked the night before.

. . . the student who always is daydreaming during class about his/her future.

. . . the student who rushes to make the college application deadline.

. . . the student who just gets by and decides to sit out second semester.

. . . the student who waits by the mailbox in April to see if his/her hard work paid off.

Welcome to the U.S.

"Attention, please, ladies and gentlemen, this is your pilot speaking. We are now approaching New York and we'll land in about twenty minutes. Thank you!" New York! Finally! After a ten hour flight we had reached America. "America!" I repeated this magic word at least ten times, exactly like those days when the prospect of being an exchange student lay on the table.

"Andrea, do you want to get into this program? You have to decide today because tomorrow is the last day to sign up for it," my father asked. Without further discussion I consented. Prompt decisions were always my specialty. The notification forms were completed the next day. America was not mentioned for the following months.

The subject was only discussed again when I received the corroborating letter and the address of my American family. My first reaction was a feverish search for my address on a map, which was unfortunately unavailable. Thereon my best friends were told the news which spread like wildfire. Their general reactions were incredulity and envy. At first even I could not believe it at all. I was afraid: everything was a dream and I could awake. But it was reality. The monotony of my life would come to an end. I would never be bored again. America, that meant adventure, freedom and "life"!

The days rushed by. Parties, farewell banquets in expensive restaurants and visits to relatives filled my date calendar. I was heart and soul in everything. I never thought of tears of farewell. When I saw the sad faces of my friends, I did not know the reason.

Suddenly the eleventh of August arrived, the day of my departure. For the first time I felt something different besides happiness. It was a feeling I could not describe. My farewell committee — parents, brothers, grandparents and friends — looked so sad and unhappy. I made a virtue of necessity. With jokes and laughing I tried to cheer them up. My true feelings were curtained behind my pretended ones. "One must remain strong," I said to myself.

The plane took off. That was the moment when I could not control my feelings anymore. I burst into tears. "One must remain strong!" Those words resounded in my ears. I pulled myself together. Thousands of questions came to my mind. "Why was I sitting in this stupid plane? What will I do if I do not get along with my American family or if I did not like the school?" I was searching for an answer. I found it when I remembered my father's words; "This year is a chance for you to develop your personality, your individuality. It will show if you can live your own life. Take advantage of it and make your own experiences. If you have problems with your family or if you don't like school you'll have to do something about it. You have to learn how to manage your own life. I hope that you'll come back as a grown up and confident person. If you return unchanged, you will not have made any profit of this year!"

The plane landed with a bump. I felt like I had slept for hours. Looking out of the window I saw New York! I was so happy like in seventh heaven. Leaving the plane I sang the song "Good Morning, America," ready to turn over a new leaf.

Senior Essay

As seniors facing a new decade, we will have to deal with double-digit inflation, fuel shortages, world hunger and the decline of the middle class. But we can also look forward to new experiences, careers, college, and basically becoming accepted, productive members of society. We will soon be able to experience independence, the root of the American dream. Also we will be responsible for carrying on the tradition of our forefathers, establishing new traditions, and contributing to the well being of all humanity.

Contemplating the future, the question of being prepared to meet the challenge of the world has to be asked. For eighteen years we have been somewhat sheltered. Minors by law, we were protected by our families and school, and we were ususally able to run away from our problems if we were not able to handle them. Now, our predicaments have changed drastically. We must stand on our own two feet and be responsible adults. When we make a decision, we must learn to live with the consequences, whether they be good or bad.

We have our entire lives in front of us to do what we want. Many of us feel that this is it, graduation, the beginning of everything. I feel that this statement is false to some extent. We have already begun to discover and accept our personal capabilities and attitudes. Whether or not we achieve our potential is entirely up to us.

Soon we will have the freedom to become either a success or a failure, strong or weak, honest or deceitful, rich or poor. The choice is up to each of us. It is not a question of what we were given, it is a matter or how effectively or ineffectively we make use of our resources. The key is to set your goals high and strive to achieve them; and with a positive attitude can accomplish anything that we set our mind to do.

— Brenda George

Special Friends . . .

1980-81 was the year that we were joined by some special friends here at Weymouth North. Room 131 was transformed to house an assembly line that was constantly in motion.
The Sheltered Workshop is a special educational service provided by the town of Weymouth. The class is taught by Barbara Wight, a twelve year veteran of teaching, herself a former graduate of Weymouth North.
The students are instructed in survival skills and improve their basic working ability. The students range in age of 19 to 21 and spend much of their time developing assembly line skills.
They made a welcome and pleasant addition to the student body.

On December 5 and 6 the lights shone brightly on the Drama Club's production of The Man Who Came To Dinner. Jim Winn starred as Sheridan Whiteside, an overbearing, rude and pompous radio celebrity who drops in on an average American family for dinner, and ends up staying for a month. The antics of Denise Cordingly, Janet Podeiko, Rich Carmichael, April Wilson, John Gannon and Helen Kidd kept the audience in stitches. Several members of the Weymouth North community were spotted rolling in the aisles.

Denise Cordingly, David Connolly, Lisa DelRusso and John Leone transported us westward to Oklahoma on the first two weekends in April. The cast was enthusiastic and talented and the audience was appreciative. It was reported that the corn really was as high as an elephant's eye.

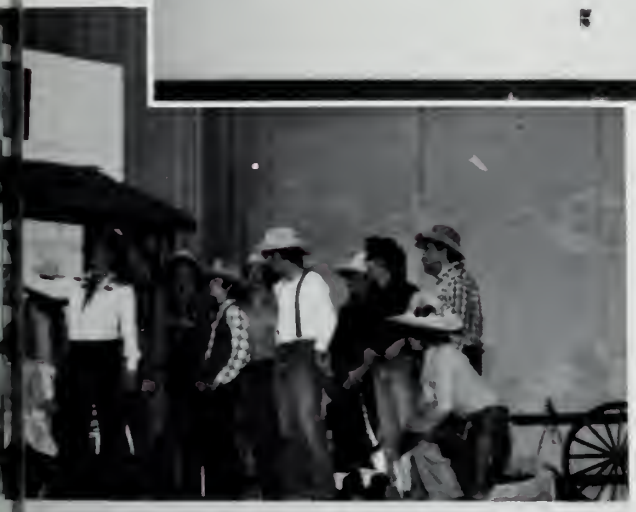
A Rat is Squeaking



Is a pack of squeaking rats in the basement enough to drive a poor girl nuts? The Drama Club's production of A Rat is Squeaking tried to answer this pressing question. John Gannon, Richard Carmichael, Denise Cordingly, Frances Abouzeid, Chris Kelly and David Geissler took us on a startling psycological journey during a Humanities Month production during the second week of March. (George Ghiorse, Bill Martin) " Taking it easy on a Friday afternoon."

Some teachers sit on their desks; some stand formally behind podiums. Some speak softly; some can be heard from the opposite ends of the school. There are sedentary teachers and those who pace, jump, run and even dance around the room to make a point. Some teachers are definitely mellow, their image low-key; some were born for the stage. Some talk with their hands, developing unique, intricate and complex systems of signs known only to their students. They lecture, lead discussions, ask questions, cajole, conduct — and listen. How they do it is all a matter of style.

As Time Goes By . . . "1980"

The year 1980 was characterized by uncertainty and disillusionment. The country was unmercifully bombarded with such a dramatic series of painful shocks and unexpected surprises that it never had the chance to fully recover. We bated out breath and anxiously waited for what would happen next. The occurences were beyond our control. We had an overwhelming feeling of helplessness, an emotion that led to disillusion and loss of faith in the country's ability to control its own destiny.

People began to lose confidence in themselves and their country. If a minute nation like Iran could "kidnap" America and indirectly control its fate, who knew what would happen next? Things were getting out of hand: Russia invades Afghanistan, blacks riot in Miami, smuggled aliens die in an Arizona desert, John Lennon slain, Hostages in Iran, abortive mission fails, hostages still in Iran . . .

Frustrated with the turn of events, angry with Carter's incompetency and lost in despair, the American people took a swing to the right and in a landslide election, chose Ronald Reagan, an inferior actor who promised "to set America on its feet again." The American people were fed up with Carter's inadequacy. Scandals of "Billygate", his inability to rescue the hostages, and his insipidness as compared to Reagan's vigor lost him the chance of reelection. Reagan was elected because of his conservative policy. Despite his ignoring of the individual, denouncing of the ERA, and blundering comments about the Ku Klux Klan and Mafia, Reagan instilled confidence, a quality that many had lost.

Locally, proposition 2½ threatened to cut public institutions and services, there was a gas shortage and people had to cope with the coldest winter since 1882. The controversial Levi Hart case plagued Boston; the "T" had financial problems: rock throwers on route 3 stoned cars and injured several people. All in all, it was not a good year for Massachusetts, yet others had problems too.

Chrysler tried valiantly to bail itself out of its financial woes, while scientists sought to control spirited Mount St. Helens. The year "1984" seemed to come four years early judgeing from artificial insemination, toxic waste, the first successful cloning experiment, and sperm banks which feature the contributions of Nobel prize winners.

Nationwide, people had to suffer repeats of sitcoms while Screen Actor's Guild striked in Hollywood. People were biting their fingernails in anticipation of J.R.'s would-be-assassin and the results of Jessica Tate's mysterious desease. "Soap" fever swept the nation as millions of bored American housewives and students sat mesmerized by an hour of melodrama.

Non-violent protest around the nation were the result of draft registrations and voices chanting "hell no we won't go!", trite but effective, were heard.

Sportwise, Rosie Ruiz was found guilty of cheating in the Boston Marathon; the Celtics held the best record in the NBA, the Patriots almost made the playoffs, who knows what happened to the Bruins, and the Red Sox fell apart. "1980" was also a year of surprises. Certainly no one thought that the U.S.A. hockey team had a chance of placing, never mind winning the gold; yet despite overpowering odds, the team was victorious and its members were declared heroes. It comforted America to know that it still had the power to "beat the damn communists!" whether it be on a rink or elsewhere. Eric Heiden's five golds and Linda Fratianne's silver renewed faith in America's superiority; but Carter's decision to boycott the summer Olympics brought disappointment and resentment from many.

Abbie Hoffman came out from hiding and gave himself up for arrest on cocaine charges. Decline of morality hit the government as FBI officials found it necessary to bring fourth paid witnesses and the CIA attempted to bribe congressmen in the infamous Abscam Scandal. Even the President's brother was not free from corruption as he succumbed to enormous "gifts" from Libya.

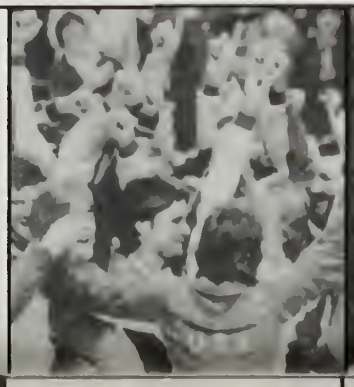
Around us, the world was changing. Workers in Poland were vehemently striking against unfair working conditions. Italy suffered a tremendous earthquake which killed thousands of her people. Pierre Trudeau was reelected as prime minister to Canada and the admirable Indira Ghandi returned to India. The Shah of Iran died in Egypt but still the hostages were held captive in Iran.

"1980" was said to be a buildup of eruptive emotions. Although it was definitely not a passive year, it was far from violent. America suffered more from frustration and disillusionment than anything else. It looked to Reagan for salvation.

— Karyl Lew

On Jan. 4, Russian armies moved across the border into Afghanistan and the world held its collective breath. Jimmy Carter denounced the move as a threat to world peace and promptly withdrew American athletes from the Moscow Olympics. Had the Cold War begun once again?

The February 1980 Winter Olympics momentarily lifted America's spirit. Many felt that the underdog U.S. hockey team's victory and Eric Heiden's five golds would be a foreshadowing of 1980.



In April of 1980, President Carter sent eight helicopters in a poorly planned effort to rescue the American hostages held captive in Iran. The mission was a failure: two helicopters crashed eight men died and the remaining helicopters had to return.

In 1980, we learned to respect the awesome power of nature. On May 8, in western Washington state, Mt. St. Helen's Volcano exploded in a fury of fire and a blanket of black ash that covered everything for hundreds of miles around.

The summer of 1980 was a time of celebration in Boston. Tall Ships, the Orient Express and other festivities helped Boston to celebrate her 350th birthday.

Once again Carter's family proved to be an embarrassment. The President's brother, Billy Carter allegedly accepted generous sums of money from Libya in return for services rendered on July 14.

On July 21, an event happened that shook many Americans more than Mt. St. Helens: Screen Actor's Guild striked in Hollywood. As a result of the thirteen week strike, which was caused by Pay TV and video cassettes, Americans had to endure television repeats and shoddy substitutes.

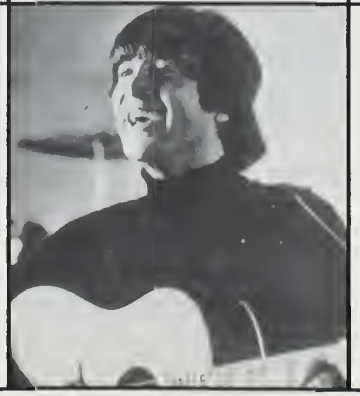
Beginning on August 14, workers striked in Poland. After many negotiations, workers were allowed to unionize and better conditions were set.

On November 4, former actor Ronald Reagan was elected as the United States' fortieth president. Many people agreed that they would rather have a "competent extremist than an incompetent moderate".

Tempted by promises of tax-cuts, Baystaters voted "YES" to proposition 2½. As a result, many teachers, firefighters, police officers etc.... were laid off and state and local controlled services were drastically cut.

As if we needed it, nature provided us with one final jolt in the jolting year of 1980. Just a few weeks before Christmas, a massive earthquake struck Italy's heartland. Thousands died and tens of villages were destroyed.

On December 8, Mark Chapman, a fanatic pschotic John Lennon fan shot his brilliant idol outside his New York home. Around the world, people mourned Lennon's tragic death and angrily claimed that such a violent act could only happen in America.



Scientific advancements were especially impressive in 1980. In December, scientists completed the first successful cloning experiment using three mice as subjects.

The yellow ribbon became a symbol of national pride and unity.

Celebrate!

By the time 1981 rolled around, Americans were ready to celebrate, to feel good about ourselves. When Iran released the fifty-two American hostages after 444 days of captivity, America found a reason for celebration. We needed national heroes, and in the hostages we found them. After years of dissension, it was O.K. to be patriotic again.

Celebrating in Chicago

For the first time in 444 days the flag flies at full staff.

The Beginning

The radio blares the news of the day; "President Reagan said today that . . . ." "Who cares?" I shout, as I turn off the radio and burrow deeper into my covers. A voice screams up the stairs, "It's 6:30. I'm not going to call again."
"Don't" I mumble as I roll over. Gradually, I begin to pull my head up from the pillow. I struggle to untangle myself from the covers. As my feet touch the cold floor, I let out an involuntary scream. I hurry into the bathroom to take a shower and back to my room to get dressed. "Oh no, I'm going to be late", I shout, as I run out the door with my coat unzipped and my hair still wet from my shower. It's the start of another school day.

Stir-Crazy

I make my way into the school and down the impersonal hallway on the way to my locker. After making small talk with all of the kids whose last names begin with the same letter as my own, I go for the big time, senior homeroom in the cafeteria. The highlight of my morning has to be my usual coffee, dark; but not too dark and just enough sugar, along with my apple crumb donut. While munching out I shoot the breeze with my friends trying desperately to come to life. From 7:50-8:00 Mr. Donoghue blesses us with his quick wit and announcements. Before I realize what has happened, I have two important meetings and have to have my picture taken all on the same afternoon. Ring!!! What a day this is going to be.

It's Academic

Whether it is purely coincidental or computer planned, it seems that most of our academic classes are scheduled in the morning. Guidance probably hopes to catch us when we are fresh and alert but the truth is that most of us are not awake until lunch. It's great if you sit at the back of the room because it is easy to assume a mock-attentive pose while really you are catching up on some needed rest.

See You at Your Locker

As I came around the corner I saw him. Every day our schedules were such that our paths crossed between fourth and fifth period. We would meet in front of 234 and talk about school or what we had done over the weekend. We never saw each other much over the weekends, so we could really appreciate each other's experiences. He kept me up on all the social events and I informed him of all the recent gossip. We had some good times. By the end of the year a couple more of my friends had joined us and we had started a small gang. We just joked around a lot. I guess after we graduate I won't see him too much. That's too bad; I'll miss him.

The Charge of the Light Brigade

As I stick my head out the door herds of people storm down the hall on their way to the cafeteria. Uncontrollable maniacs fly down the hall, crushing people in their path and hitting the doors until they smash back against the wall. Upon reaching the cafeteria lines, four people wide, people emerge from doors leading to the food. People sneak in line, just to get that one person closer. Seeing the food, I lose my appetite. Cafeteria ladies scoop potatoes, rice and tuna salad, plopping it onto plates. Green gravy, like oil, is spread over everything on the plate. I have to decide between apples, oranges, or a salad. I shake the milk to see if it's frozen, and grab a handful of napkins, knowing I'll only use one. Fondly, I practice the fine art of carrying the food to my table while dodging people heading outside for a smoke. I arrive at my table and look at the mess I fought to get. Somehow, the effort just doesn't seem worth it.

Just for the fun of it

I strolled into the gym and my boots clicked against the dusty floor. I climbed the bleachers and plopped myself at the top. Mr. Hayes came out and began to call names. He bellowed my name and I nonchalantly raised my hand. "What's your excuse, pal?" he asked. "Ah, yeh, well you see I woke up late this morning and forgot my stuff." I hesitantly replied. "F," shouted Mr. Hayes as he walked away. A cold chill came over my body, so I attempted to take a quick nap. I gently closed my eyes only to receive a volleyball on the nose.

The End

An air of tension pervaded the cafeteria. It was 2:10 and everyone in the study was impatiently waiting for the final announcement and ultimately the dismissal bell. I had brought my Calculus Book, but soon found it impossible to study with everyone else talking about this weekend's parties. Eventually I gave in and added my two cents worth about my weekend plans. I was "bummed" because I had to work both Saturday and Sunday at "Macs". I started daydreaming, but was awakened by Mr. Concannon's cherry voice briskly pouring from the intercom system. When all was said and done the race was ready to begin. At the bell approximately 1300 students rushed to their lockers and then to the exits. I fought my way through the crowd and by some miracle made it to safety. I was just getting on my bus when it struck me. I had a Key Club meeting which I had to attend.

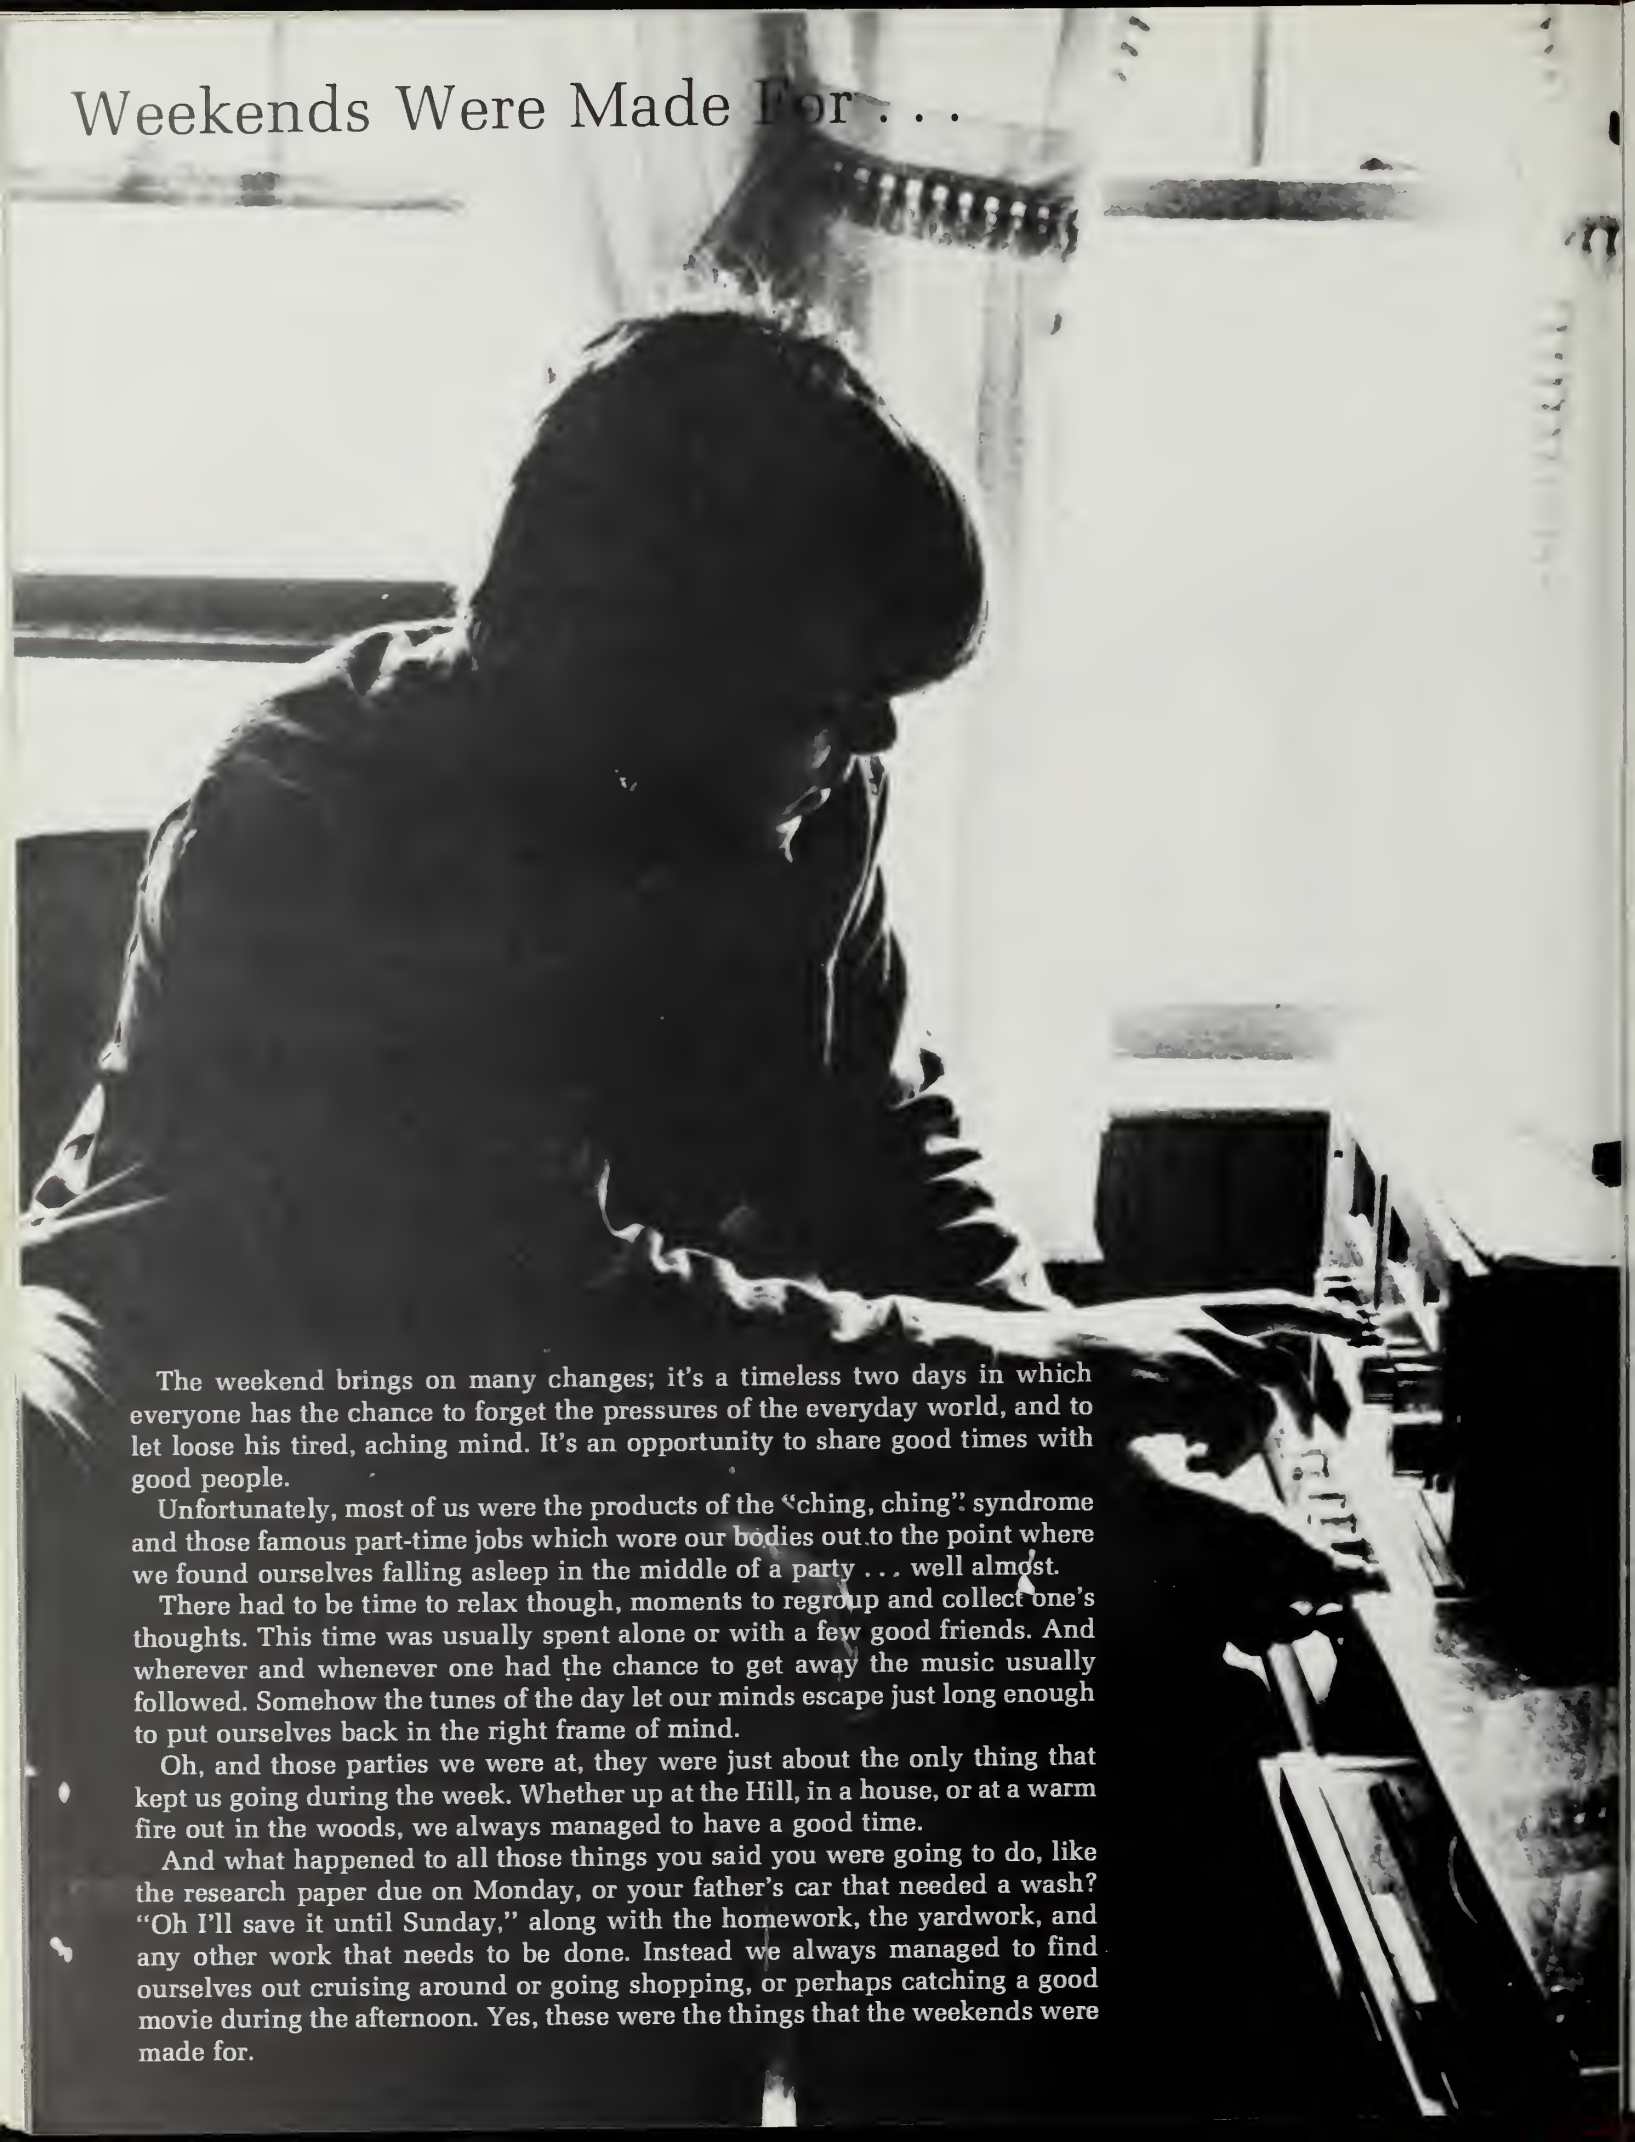
Weekends Were Made For . . .



The weekend brings on many changes; it's a timeless two days in which everyone has the chance to forget the pressures of the everyday world, and to let loose his tired, aching mind. It's an opportunity to share good times with good people.

Unfortunately, most of us were the products of the "ching, ching" syndrome and those famous part-time jobs which wore our bodies out to the point where we found ourselves falling asleep in the middle of a party . . . well almost.

There had to be time to relax though, moments to regroup and collect one's thoughts. This time was usually spent alone or with a few good friends. And wherever and whenever one had the chance to get away the music usually followed. Somehow the tunes of the day let our minds escape just long enough to put ourselves back in the right frame of mind.

Oh, and those parties we were at, they were just about the only thing that kept us going during the week. Whether up at the Hill, in a house, or at a warm fire out in the woods, we always managed to have a good time.

And what happened to all those things you said you were going to do, like the research paper due on Monday, or your father's car that needed a wash? "Oh I'll save it until Sunday," along with the homework, the yardwork, and any other work that needs to be done. Instead we always managed to find ourselves out cruising around or going shopping, or perhaps catching a good movie during the afternoon. Yes, these were the things that the weekends were made for.

'Twas the day before Turkey Day
And all through the stands
Rang the shouts and the cheers of the Weymouth North fans.
Out came the cheerleaders
Out came Mr. Conc,
Megaphone in hand.
He raised his arms high
The crowd they did cheer
In hopes that our team
Would beat South this year.

And Celebrate We Did!

On a Friday not long before Christmas, 150 seniors gathered at the LaRosa Hall in South Weymouth to celebrate the season. Sky Island, a local band, sent the pulsating strains of Southern rock sailing to the rafters. And the crowd moved to the beat and danced the night away. Just another Friday night in Weymouth . . .

February 13-17, 1981

Dear Mom and Dad,

(Sat.) We arrived in Switzerland safe and sound, but very tired! I must get some sleep. (Sun.) Well we didn't get much sleep, but the skiing and the mountains were wild and unbelievable!!! (Wed.) Italy was lots of fun We spent thousands of liras! The pizza was delicious and we bargained with the merchants for lower prices. (Thurs.) Not much to say because I'm having a hard time remembering it. (Sat.) We are in Zurich and nobody wants to leave We have all become good friends and will always look back on these wonderful memories.

The Long Run

The 1980 Boy's Cross-Country team held as much talent as any team of the past. The team's 3 win-5 loss record is not a clear picture of the closeness and promise of the team. Third year Coach David Laprise was impressed by many of the team's performances. Co-captain John Keelan was named to the Suburban League All-Star team for the second time. Other seniors performing well were Co-Captain Tim Mcleod, Scot Sallaway, and Peter Giacobbe. The team is extremely young and should fair well in next year's action.

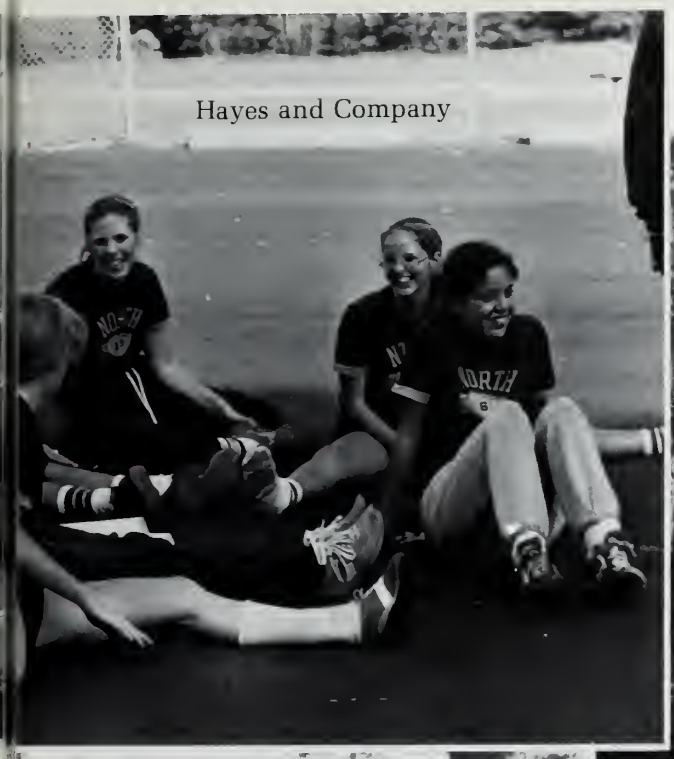
Hayes and Company



Captain Deidre Hayes

The Girl's Cross-Country team ended its season with a 2 win- 6 loss record. The team ran well in what proved to be the strongest league in the state. Deidre Hayes ran first for the girl's team most of the year until being injured and sidelined for the season. Seniors filling in for her during her absence were Marie Roche, Sue Beasley, and Sheila Keelan.

Linda Petterson shone through for the underclassmen running in the top three for the team all season.

The 1980 Girl's Soccer team posted a final season record of eleven wins, four losses and one tie. The team had three players named to the Suburban League All-Star team. Alisa McKenna, Linda Nichols and Diane Kelley were all honored due to their tremendous performances throughout the year.

The girls qualified for the state tournament and advanced to the second round of action. Coach Hayes was impressed by the enthusiasm and hard work displayed by the team.

The team holds many underclassmen, proving that the level of competition performed this year will be repeated in the future.

Setting Goals

This year the Maroon soccer team proved its ability to teams throughout the league. Shocking opponents with both their skills and know how the Maroons finished possessing a most respectable record. With eight wins, four ties, and four losses, Weymouth North soccer experienced its best year ever. Under the direction of Coach Shoff the players united as a team and played in a winning fashion. Without a doubt the highlight of the season came against Brockton at Legion Field. After suffering a terrible defeat to the Boxers in the first half of the year, North came fighting back. The result . . . a devastating upset. The Maroons proved victorious by a 3-2 margin. From this point on the team rolled and the final statistics definitely reflect the effort.

Jim Bell demonstrating poise

Co-Captain "Artie" Griffen proved to be a most valuable asset to the Maroon offense this year. Combining his speed, strength and skills in every game brought him the recognition he deserved. Following the season, the coaches of the Suburban League named "Artie" M.V.P.

Playing on rough turf.

The Varsity football team played to a 1 win, 8 loss, 1 tie season this year. The team, under veteran coach Dick Macpherson, displayed courage and spirit while competing in the always tough Suburban League Captains Bill Callahan and Scott Chaisson lead the team in spirit and enthusiasm.

This year's squad held only twelve seniors who all played extremely well. The Maroons tied yearly rival Weymouth South. Thus extending an unbeaten streak against South to four years. Many of next year's starters will be back and the team's future is promising.

Chaisson and Steven Lee were selected to the Suburban League All-Star team due to their fine efforts throughout the season.

Three record breakers dominated the 1980 Girl's Swim season. Co-captains Barbara Evans and Patty Keaney combined for three of the four records broken. Barbara took the 200 IM record and Patty captured both the 50 and 100 meter freestyle marks. Also having a tremendous season was Elaine Santry who broke the school record in diving.

The team finished with a very respectable five win-five loss season. Under the direction of first year coach Christine Cunniff, the team worked extremely well together. Coach Cunniff was impressed by the talent of the team and was proud of its efforts which improved last year's record. The team included many underclassmen and the future for the growing program looks quite promising. The girls showed their determination by beating cross-town rival Weymouth South.

The 1980 golf team posted a final season record of three wins and five losses. The Team started slowly but under the direction of Coach Walter Murphy they regrouped to post late season victories. Captain Ann Linehan was voted to the Suburban League All-Star team. She played superbly for the team all year. Seniors Charles Abbott and John Gabriel also contributed to the team. The season was highlighted by a victory over Weymouth South.

The 1981 Boys indoor track team was marked by three record breakers: Paul Cavallo, Bill Scarpelli, and John Keelan; each broke a school record. Cavallo, the most consistent high jumper in the Suburban league, jumped to the record on his way to being the team's highest point getter. John Keelan eclipsed the mile record and Bill Scarpelli broke the 300 yard dash. Under the direction of Coaches Laprise and Perrin the team finished with a 2 win, 5 loss, and 1 tie record. Keelan also broke the school record in the two mile late in the season.

A pensive Bill

The life of a student-athlete is tough but satisfying. At North High many students begin their day at eight in the morning and end it at 2:15 in the afternoon. For many others the day continues until five or six in the evening. These are the athletes of our school. Each one strives to do his or her best in a particular sport. It takes many hours of practice to perfect the skills needed to compete in athletics at the high school level. Some of our school's athletes will go on to participate in college and beyond. Their training now is an important step for them.

School and sports must be balanced by each athlete. Many athletes find themselves behind in school if they are not careful. Sometimes practice must be missed to keep up with school work. Often times there is a fine line between what comes first. There have been countless times when athletes go home, open the books and then quickly fall asleep.

The balance between sports and academics must be kept in proper proportion. Academics should come first but athletics also play a definite role in the lives of young men and women.

The students at North High have shown tremendous respect for both sides of our school. We have produced fine athletes who are fine students and surely this will continue in the future.

The life of a student athlete is certainly a difficult one to lead. As we (North High Seniors) grow older, we will look back and realize how important both school and sports really were in shaping our lives.

On The Rebound

Despite a final record of 2 wins and 18 losses the 1980-81 Boys' Basketball team showed supreme effort in every game. Competing in possibly the toughest league in the country is no easy task and the Maroons were outsized in most of their games.

The high point for the team was a decisive late season win over Weymouth South. In front of a packed house the team easily won in an exciting cross town battle.

Seniors contributing to the team were Bob Griffin, Charlie Abbott, Willie Shea, and Mark Barrett. Also, giving valuable service were Tim Macleod, Jim Donovan, Jim Bell, and Scott Chaisson.

Taking It To The Limit

The 1981 Girls' Basketball season was both gratifying and exciting for Coach Arnold as she watched her Maroons reach the state tournament.

The girls finished with a regular season record of 12 wins and 5 losses. The highlight of the year was a one point victory over Newton North. The girls avenged an earlier season loss in this game, and also qualified for tournament action.

Seniors Alisa Mckenna, Jean Melville, Pam Turner, Maureen Sybertz, Corrine Rober, and Traci Molignano all made valuable contribution to the team.

Junior Joanie Powers was the team's most consistent scorer and rebounder. Along with Joanie are many talented sophomores and juniors which makes next season look great!

The 1980-81 Boys' Gymnastics team had their finest year ever finishing their season with a 6 win and 1 loss record. The team was undefeated in the Suburban league and captured the league title for the second year in a row. The team competed in the state finals under the direction of Coach Dick Hayes.

Seniors contributing to the team were Jim Dempsey, Peter Hamilton, Steve Poreca, and Paul Jung.

The team's future is also bright as junior Steve Gustafson, the team's best all round gymnast, is sure to be a threat in next year's meets.

It Keeps You Running

Track coach David Laprise showed he can practice what he preaches when he undertook an amazing feat last summer. Dave ran 1500 miles in 30 days for the benefit of Cancer research. With the help of many sponsors, Coach Laprise and his two sons covered the East coast ahead of schedule. The run was dedicated to a close friend of the Laprise's who died of cancer. Running forty miles a day, Dave raised a lot of money and gained valuable television time for the National Cancer Society. His outstanding effort and tremendous character has been greatly appreciated by the many people suffering from cancer.

Coach Laprise has set an outstanding example for all of us to follow. In talking with the coach, one will find something beyond training and stamina. Coach Laprise has unending drive and hope. Dave has given many inspring talks to high schools and businesses. His words relate closely to those expressed by countless others who have achieved success. He simply states: "Do anything, but do it well, reach for the stars!"

An Ode to a Friend to the 2Js, S, D, and expecially E

It has been a long year,
a difficult year
And I thank you for the gifts
that you have given me:
Confidence, Friendship, Security.
You were always there to tell me
I was beautiful;
I always laughed when you told me —
I may have doubted your judgment,
but I trusted your sincerity.
You taught me to love beauty —
in all forms.
You gave me appreciation for the aestethics, and you showed me that what are most important are those abstract images that we cannot see.
You encouraged me to look beneath the surface — further than my eyes could see. Like you did; like you do.
You alleviated my burdens when I felt that my sanity, like the fine sands of an hourglass would slip through my finger — threatening to pull me in too.
I have learned from you and with you.
You complimented and critized;
you lectured and comforted
All for which I am grateful.
And now as you are leaving, you take a part of me with you, just as you leave a fragment of yourself in me.

— Karyl Lew

A knock on the door, you come in, how the years have changed you. The new-you glances around scanning for what you can find, you spy the book and looking through the pages you loosen up the stern hard face turns to smile and we share a glass of wine. The end of the book has some empty pages, where pictures need to be kept, there still is some time we both agree and we part again agreeing someday the pages will be complete.

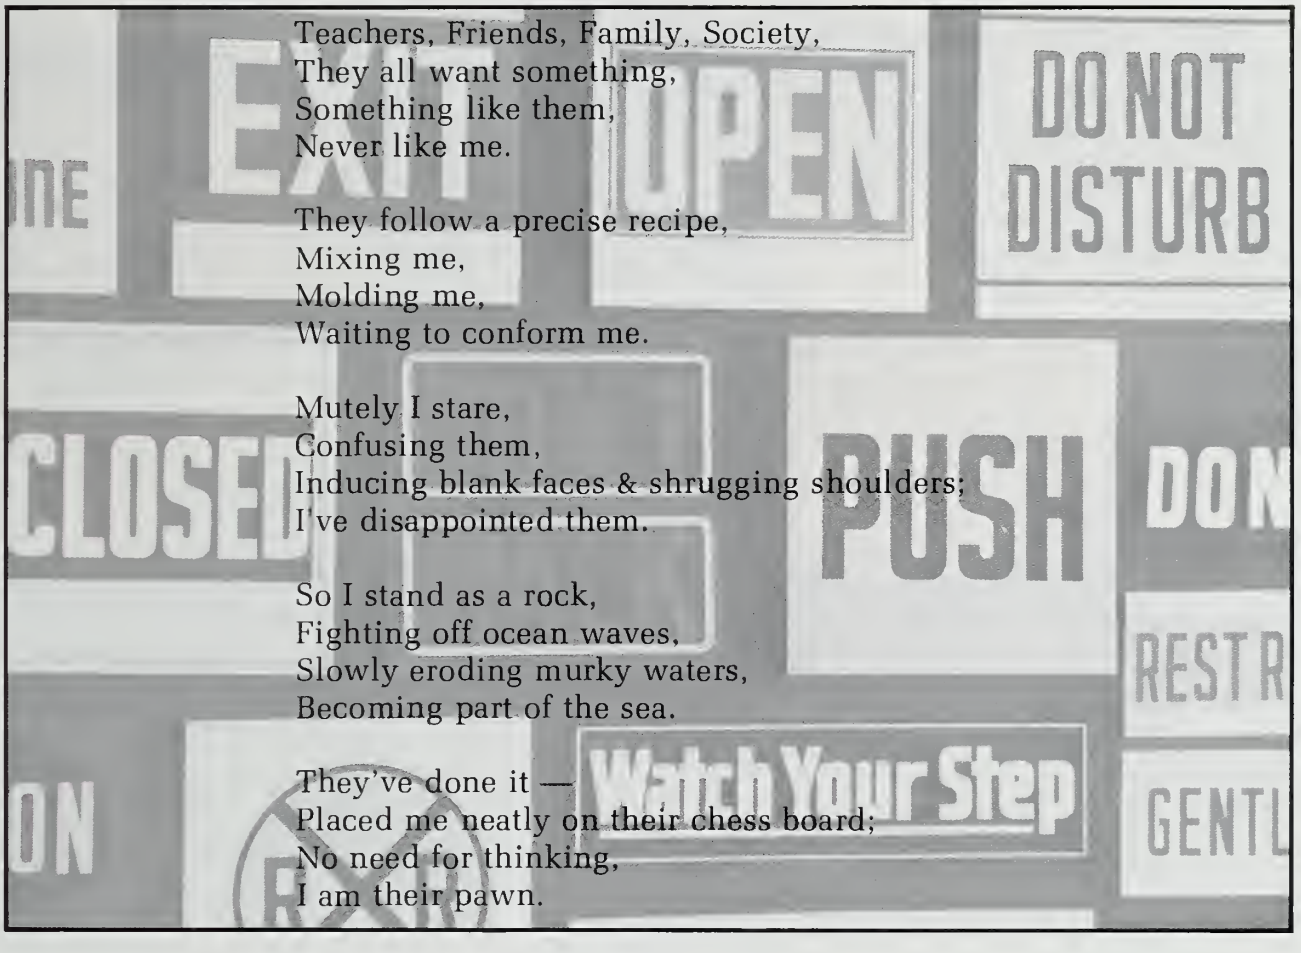
Checkmate

They're all around me,
Trying to suck the marrow of my life,
'Till there's nothing left,
'Till I'm part of them.



Teachers, Friends, Family, Society,
They all want something,
Something like them,
Never like me.

They follow a precise recipe,
Mixing me,
Molding me,
Waiting to conform me.

Mutely I stare,
Confusing them,
Inducing blank faces & shrugging shoulders;
I've disappointed them.

So I stand as a rock,
Fighting off ocean waves,
Slowly eroding murky waters,
Becoming part of the sea.

They've done it —
Placed me neatly on their chess board;
No need for thinking,
I am their pawn.

Fighting for myself,
Ignoring them,
I face an endless battle.
I cannot get wounded.

With my sharp, crisp, skills turning slow and clumsy, my opponent strips me of the ball. Feet stampeded even harder down field with the sudden turn of events.
While white shirts desperately try to retain possession, brown shirts, drawing extra breaths, give it their all to manuver down field. The shouts of yelling spectators echo from the sidelines while the brown shirts continue their move. Off a tired leg, the ball is crossed toward the goal mouth. Sweaty, embattled players, their faces revealing exhaustion, turn in the ball's direction. My position becomes helpless for our cause, and my eyes soon witness my mistake.
The ball, heading for the net is stopped on the foot of a brown shirt. With split-second actions he fires the ball at the net. The crowd rises to follow the ball's path. For a split-second all is silent. The fast, hard game appears to be moving in slow motion.
The pain of bruised and abused bodies hurts more now than ever before. Like the depressing sight of a sudden storm ruining a beautiful day, the game is now tied at one to one.

— Joe Curran

The Window

We all look out the window
Though it sometimes seems dusty and old.
Outside the glass there are many things
There is happiness, glory and gold.
The things outside that window
Are the ones that we all want to get
We work, we dream, we toil,
We strive to do our best.
Yet the window is delicate
The weather proofing strong
The window smashes, the dreams are gone.
We're sad, we're lonely, but we still aren't wrong.

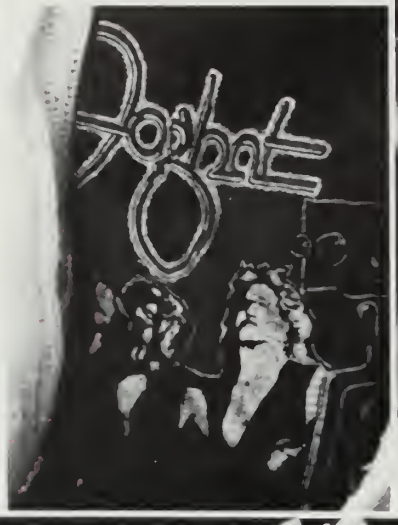
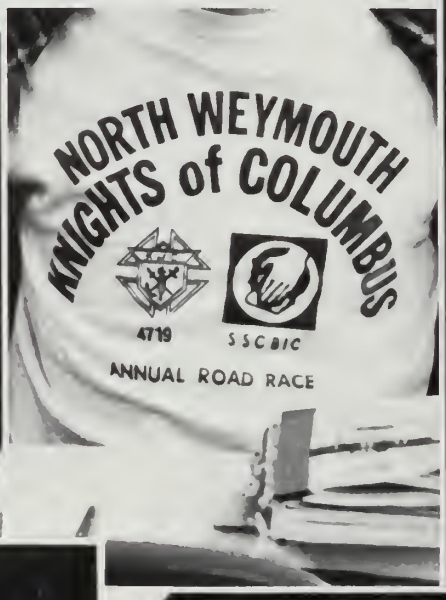
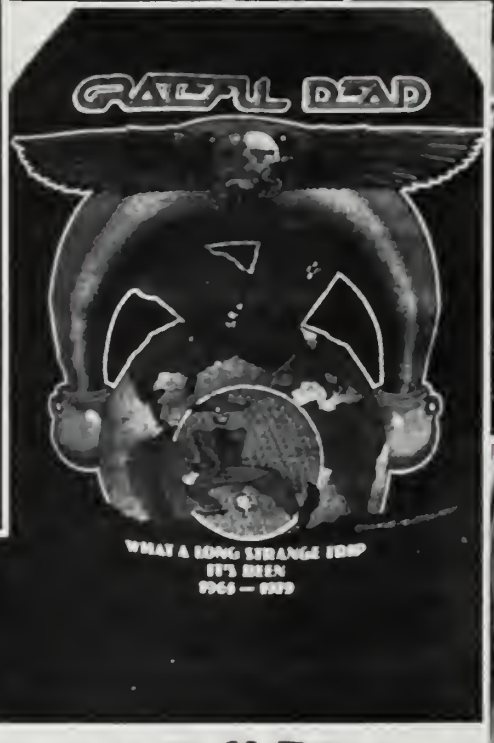
— John Keelan

What's in a Name?







Battle of the Bulge

Ever so slowly
I walk toward the bed,
My hands start to tremble
My mind fills dread.
A horrible silence
Drenches the air,
As my terror filled eyes,
See the hideous pair.
How innocent
And serene they appear.
But I am not fooled,
Truth's moment is near,
I gather my courage
In the dull light of dawn,
Then lunge for their legs,
The battle is on!
We scratch and we tear,
We pull and we tug,
I get the advantage,
We crash to the rug!
Now is my chance,
Not a moment to spare;
I jam my feet into
The horrible pair.
I try to work quickly,
My palms damp with sweat,
They're stunned for the moment,
But its not over yet.
I grasp them with skill
Yank them up to my hip,
They suddenly stir;
Ahh! I'm caught in their grip!
I twist and I pull
With all of my might;
But the viscious beasts
Put up quite a fight.
The agony deepens
With each passing inch;
As I pull them up further
They squeeze and they pinch.
I have got them now
One more tug and I've won;
Oh no, I forgot
Still the zipper's undone!
I pull in my belly
And take a deep breath,
I shiver with fear
This could be the grip of death.
I scream from the pain
As they claw at my skin.
I'm burning with anger,
How I wish I was thin.
I use all of my strength
I hear the snap, snap.
And with God on my side
I'll close the zipper's great gap.
I rest for a moment,
Count slowly to ten,
Pull it up only half way,
I'll try it again.
The zipper is up finally
The battle I've won,
My foe hugs me tightly
We now appear one.
Though I didn't enjoy it,
The fight was quite fair;
I hate these damn pants
But they're all I had to wear!

Renee LaVellee

Attitudes

Over the year, we conducted several surveys concerning the attitudes of students at Weymouth North. The answers received were as different, diverse, and interesting as the many students polled. We thought you might enjoy hearing what your fellow students thought.

If you were drafted today would you go to war?

I believe that it is my duty to defend my country.

I am not sure how I would respond to the actual fighting; I doubt anyone can answer that question.

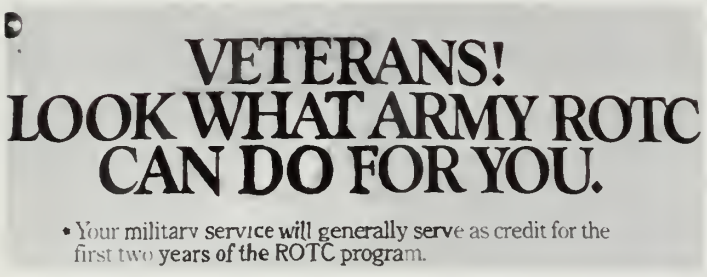
Dying to me, is immaterial.

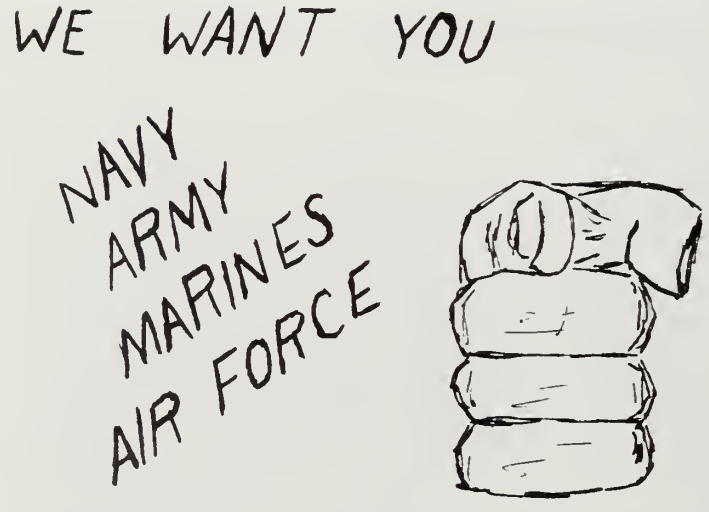
I think we should stand behind our country and show our loyalty.

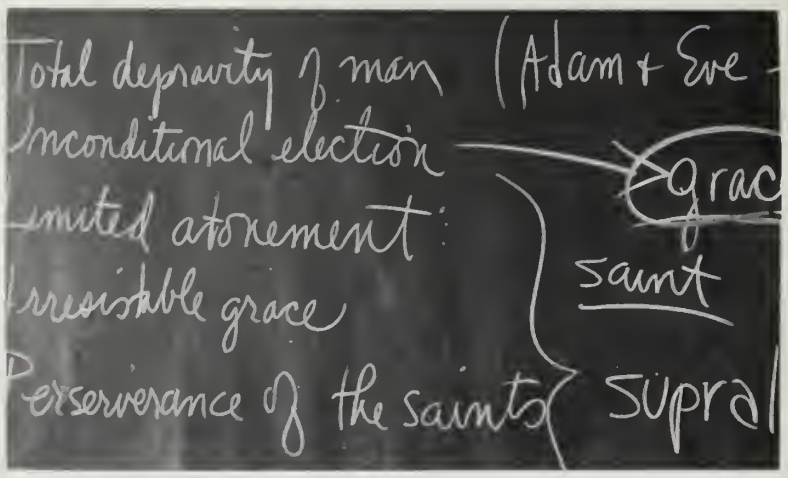
No way! I would rather walk the rest of my life and burn wood than fight for oil.

I feel that we can all live in peace no matter which race, creed or color we are.

I am a girl and girls should not fight.







As a teenager what is the major cause of STRESS in your life?

The many pressures from my peers can sometimes be overwhelming.

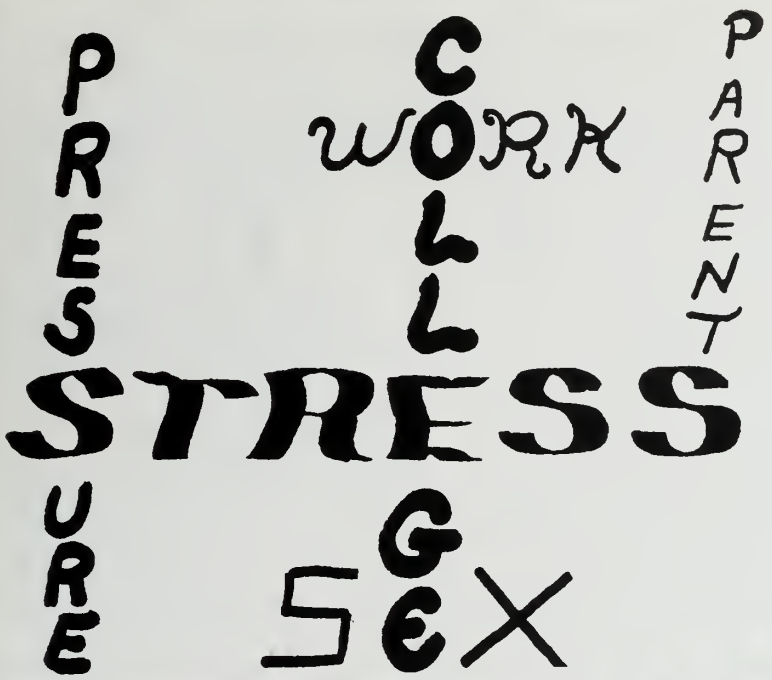
I feel that sex is a major cause of anxiety in my life.

The choice of a college and the future produces many tensions.

My parents cause a lot of stress in my life. I like to go someplace and just be alone to help ease the pain.

Money is a big problem since it provides for college, my car and gas, clothes, and weekend festivities.

The major cause of stress in my life is trying to juggle my schedule around to include everything I want to do.



What do you really like or dislike about high school?

The part of school I like, is seeing my old friends and making new friends each year.

I like being able to relate to my teachers because I've come to realize that they are in the same boat as me.

I love those delicious entree lunches served buffet style. Not only are these lucious meals prepared by well-qualified chefs, but they also taste better than the food in the famous "Blue Fox" restaurant.

I enjoy the coffee and donuts every morning.

I like participating in some of the sports and extra-curricular activities.

I think that the wide variety of courses is great.

The friendships made now will hopefully last a lifetime.

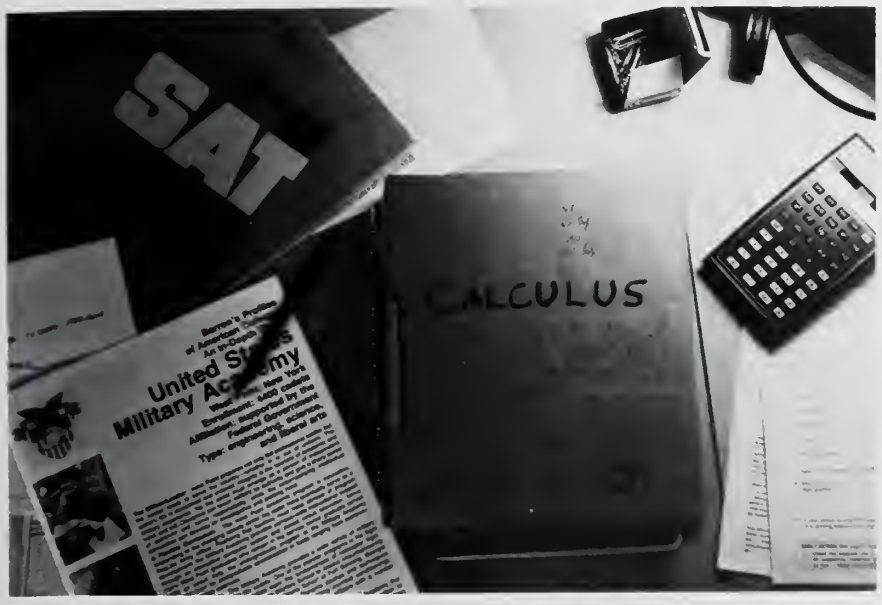
I dislike the constant homework and tests.

I hate getting up so early in the morning for school.

I don't like when it rains while I'm walking to school.

I hate being cooped up in the building all day long.

I dislike the newly approved Proposition 2½. Many of the best teachers, courses, and extra-curricular activities will be cut from the budget.



Attitudes

Each daybreak brings us closer to the impossible, and farther from the inevitable.

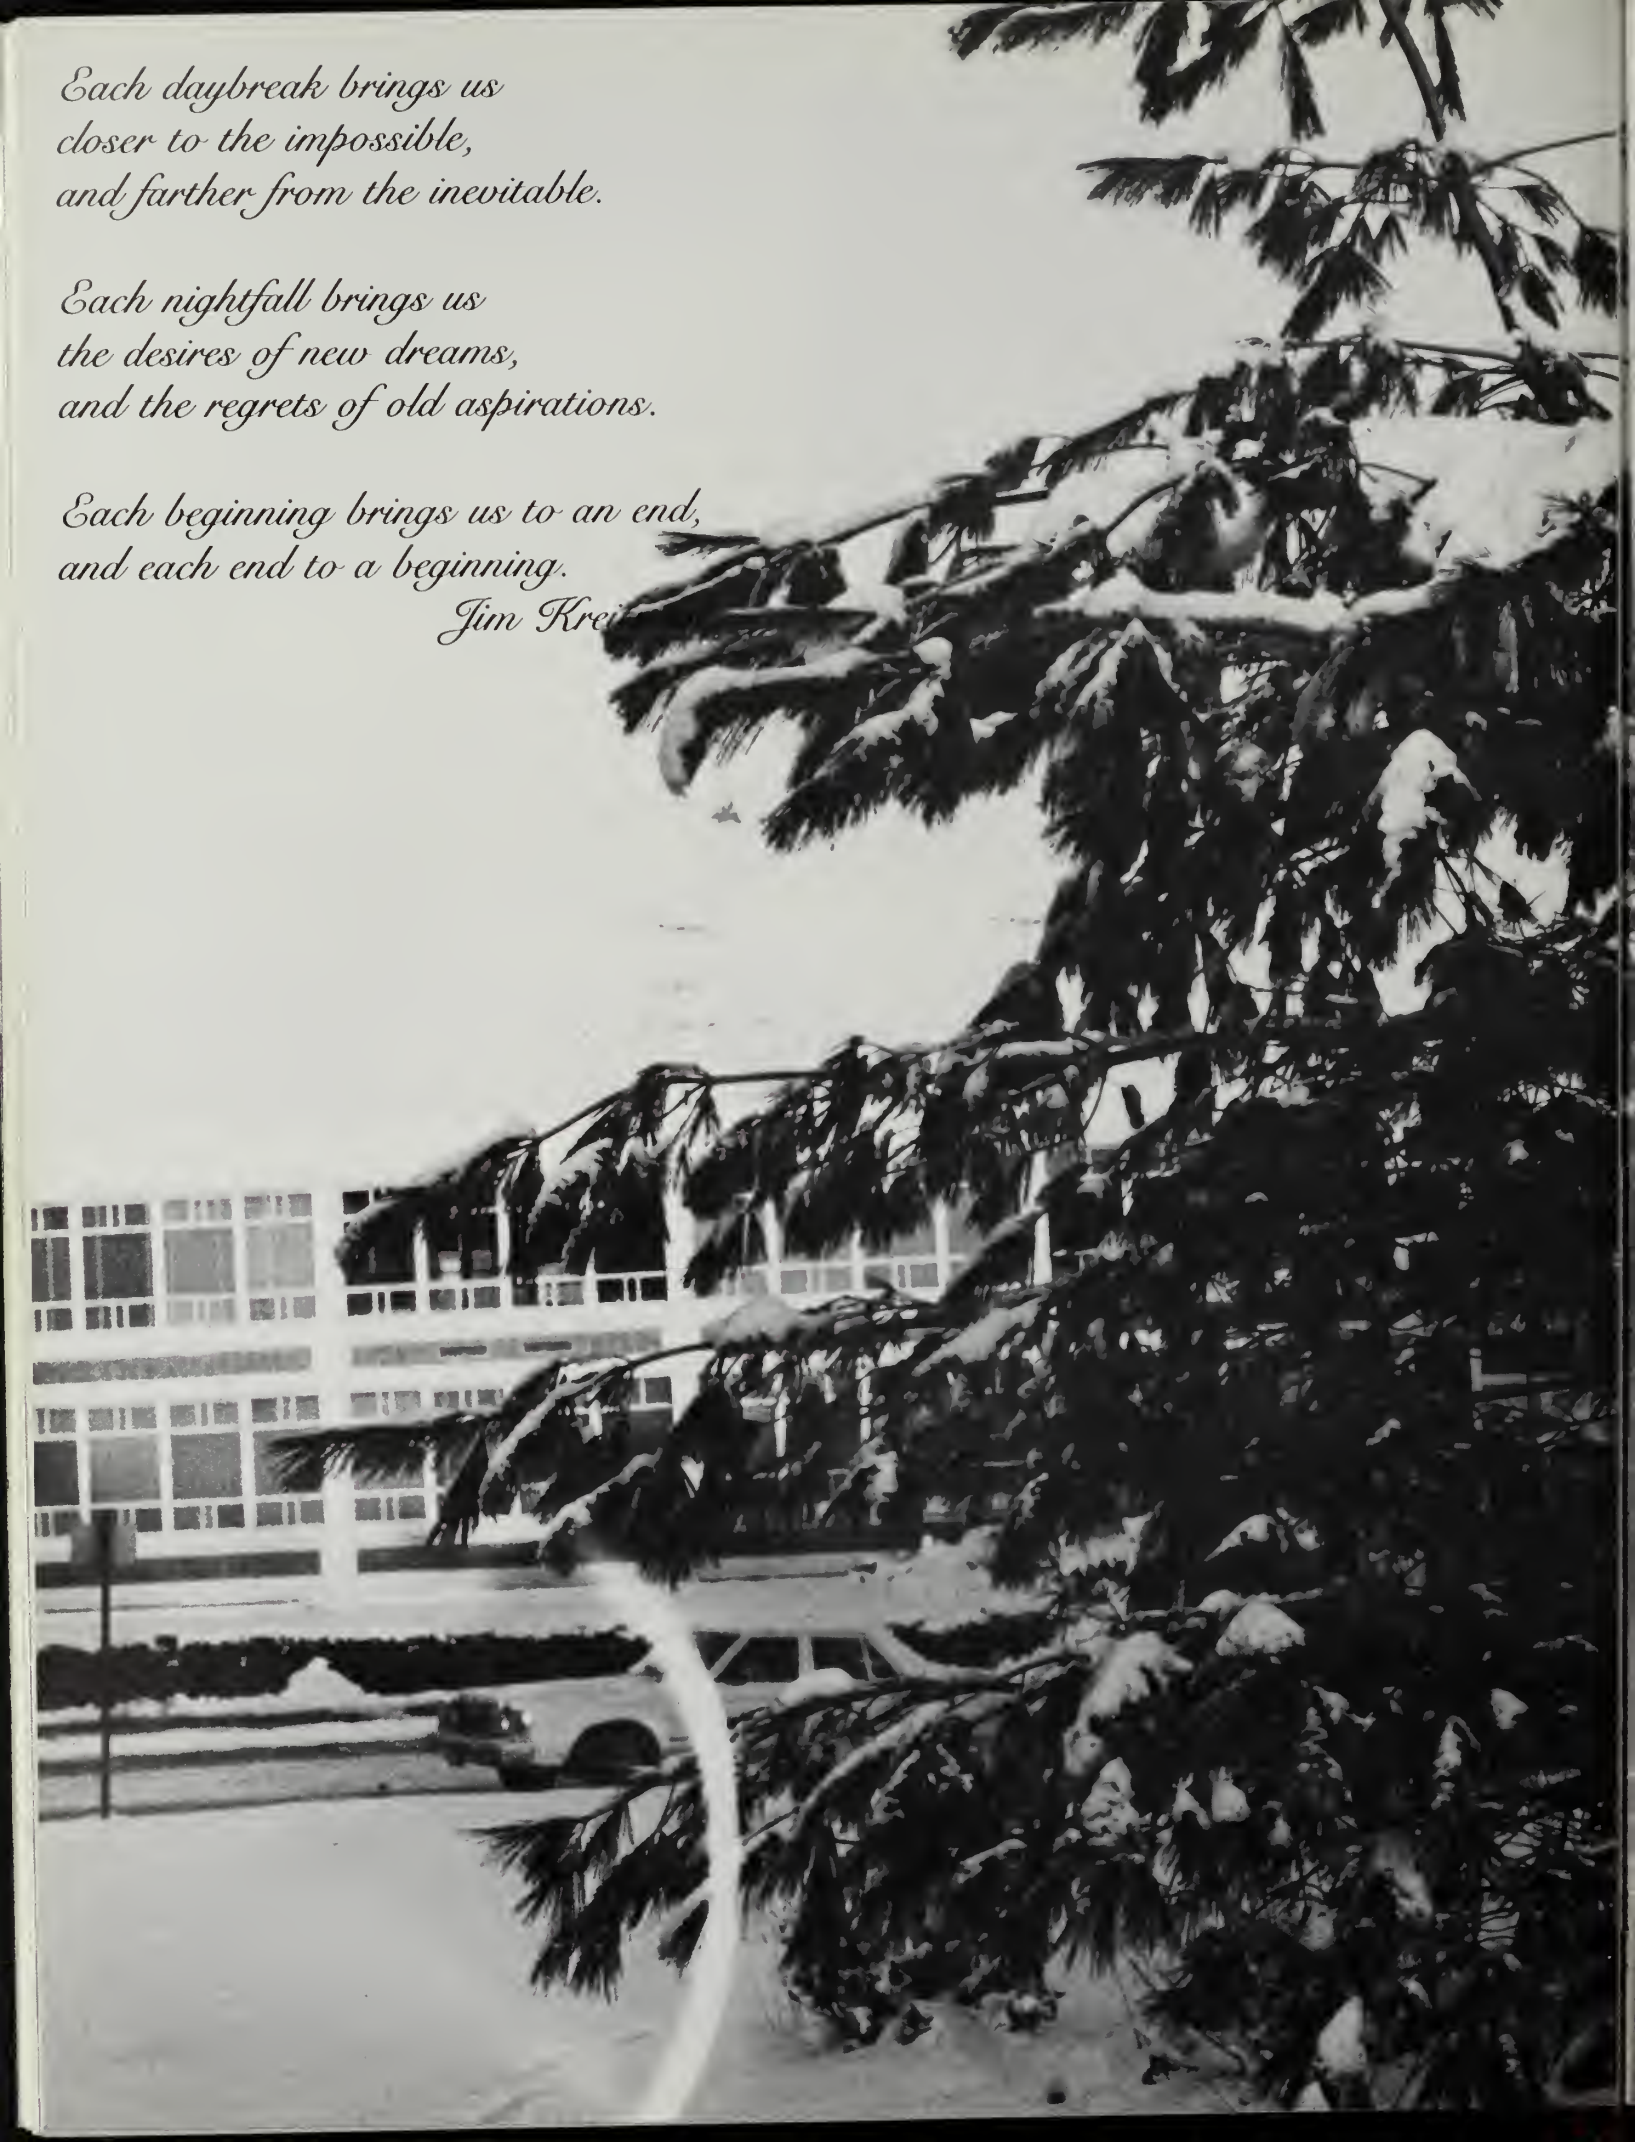
Each nightfall brings us
the desires of new dreams,
and the regrets of old aspirations.

Each beginning brings us to an end,
and each end to a beginning.

Jim Krei



Making it happen

We were fortunate to have many efficient committees. These committees attempted to improve our school programs. There was the assembly committee which provided us with the many entertaining programs for our enjoyment.

Prom Committee

Senior Activities Committee
1st row: Jeffery Tocchio, William Shea, Laurie Pizzano 2nd row: Mary Beth Breed, Suzanne Silva, Mr. Ghiorse, Harvey, Janet Podeiko 3rd row: Linda Nicholson, Lori Leo, June Weaver 4th row: Tracey Molignano, Laurie Bean, Jeanne Foy 5th row: Barbara Evans, Carol Janeway, Alisa McKenna, Cheryl Mercier, Timothy Leahy, Dave Linehan 6th row: Stephen Lee, William Scarpelli, James Donovan, Karen Haas, Joseph Curran, David Archibald, Steve Brennan, Brian Herlihy

The Prom committee planned the biggest event in our senior year. The Cap and Gown committee was responsible for obtaining our measurements and preparing us for graduation.

Checks and balances

Chess Club
Front Row: Scott Sallaway. Robert Nortrem Back Row: Sal Grasso, Carl Gustafson

Many students have joined the competative Math and Chess teams. The Math team is a part of the Greater Boston Math League. Four times a year, the team competes with eight other teams in it's division.

The division is divided into junior varsity and varsity. The junior varsity team is presently running a close first in its league. Both the junior varsity and varsity have done exceedingly well. The Chess Club remains undefeated and should be congratulated; they have had a challenging year.

Math Team
Front Row: Frances Abouzeid, Elaine Santry, Mrs. Halloran Back Row: Chris Hawkesworth, Galen Grote, Mr. Green, Paul Soper, Paul Duca

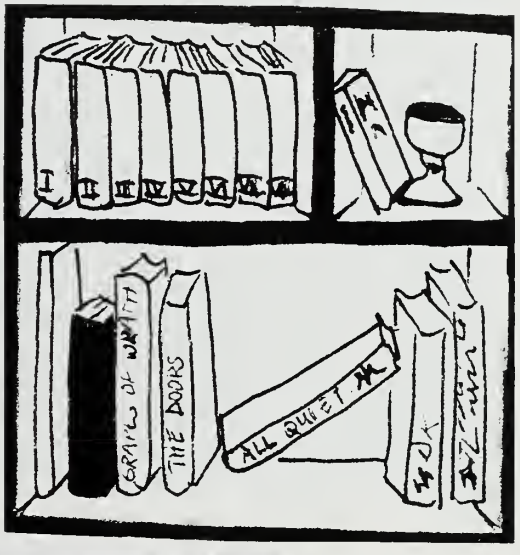
Keeping things in order

The Key Club is a Kiwanis sponsored organization. It performed such tasks as billboard painting and court yard clean-up. In the community, the Key Club held a franks and beans dinner and sold advertising in the Thanksgiving Day Football Game. All proceeds were given to the Ronald MacDonald House.

Key Club
First Row: Peter Hamilton, James Donovan, Frank Glegg, James Kreitman, Mr. Daly Second Row: Shawn Malloy, Dan Kelly, Michael Smith, Jim Bell Third Row: Kathy Boben, Eileen Daly, Kara Hemingway, Debbie Fulton, Carol Cazeault, Carl Gustafson, Jason Constantino, Jeff Hynes, Mark Pumphrey Fourth Row: Joseph Curran, Peter Deneault, David Scannell, Steven Zunino



Library Assistants
Joanne Affsa, Cindy Jewitt, Tina Fowler

Our library aids helped ease the burden of research and were always willing to lend a helping hand when we were selecting a biography. Their other duties included sorting and replacing books.

Setting the pace

Pep Squad: Laura Gedutis, Theresa Tanner, Tina George

The Pep Club is composed of very active girls who build up school spirit by cheering at football games, pep rallies, and parade. They meet twice a week to plan routines and fund raising events.

Band and Flag Team

This year North High is fortunate enough to have its first Flag Team. The members practiced daily in the fall to accomplish grace and precision. They have performed with the band at pep rallies, parades and football games.

Band

Keeping spirits high

The North High Cheerleaders were a most active group. They were at all the football games, ready to cheer them on to a victory. Their enthusiasm was overwhelming. These girls practiced many hours throughout the school year; preparing for football and basketball games, pep rallies and parades.

Cheerleaders

Karen Lindquist, Lisa Ohman, Ellen Walker, Carol Cazeault, Jennifer George, Nora Zerfoss, Janet Hagelstein, Maureen Donohoe, Patricia Leonard

This group should be commended for its everlasting spirit, which helped increase the dedication in our school.

Making the grade

The Student Council consists of a small group of selected students to represent the student body. This council provides a link between the students and the administration. The Student Council votes on school policy; this year implementing a more efficient tardy plan. The students sell tonic and spirit buttons. Also, the council has chosen the school ring.

Student Council

The Weymouth North chapter of the National Honor Society is comprised of a select group of students posessing much leadership, scholarship, character and citizenship. Members have participated in many service programs. A car wash, courtyard clean-up, Red Cross blood drive and participation in the Southeastern Regional Drama Festival were all undertaken this year. Also, members of the Honor Society tutored over 150 students in their studies. The Trivia Bowl and socials were also highlighted the year.

National Honor Society

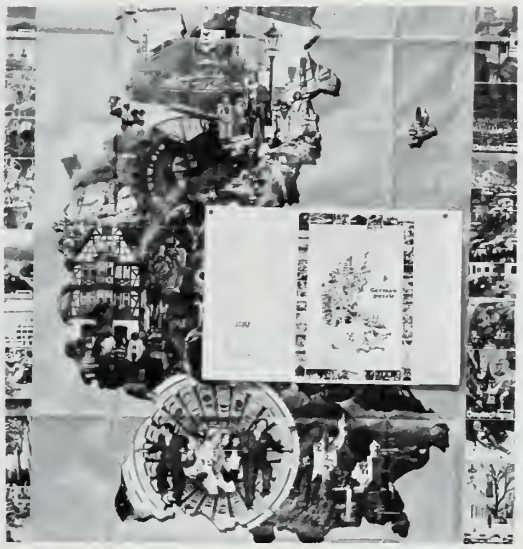
Expanding our horizons

Our foreign language clubs enable students to learn about different cultures. They have gone to restaurants to try foreign foods. They also have attended a cultural show in Boston.

French Club
Front Row: June Weaver, Kenneth Fitzpatrick Back Row: Mrs. Dufault, Laura Walsh, Andrea Gombas, Laurie Pizzano, Christine Hatch, Francis Abouzeid



Spanish Club

The students in these groups have benefited from these activities. They have gained knowledge that will enable them to understand the language, and it's cultures.

Pressing the point

North Highlights

North Highlights, a student run newspaper, tried to capture current news events in and out of school.

Two literary organizations in our school were Reflections and North Highlights. The staffs worked hard to produce enlightening, enriching information. Reflections is a magazine written by the students of North High. It had many various types of writing including short stories, poems, essays, and art work.

Reflections
Jeanne Foy, June Weaver, Miss Jehle, Victor Alosi, James Kreitman, Andrea Gosselin

Breaking away

This year, ten students from North went to Washington, D.C. as a part of the Project Close-up program. This trip indoctrinated students to the complex structure of our government. Highlights of the trip included visits with congressmen, sightseeing, and many intense seminars.

Project Close-up
Front Row: Renee LaVallee, Janet Podeiko, Janet Pendergast, June Weaver Back Row: Mr. Lofgren, Glenn Summerlin, George Cavanaugh, Dave Moran, Scott Sallaway, Peter Hamilton

The Ski Club highlighted their year with the long awaited trip to Switzerland. Each of them brought back a treasure of souveniers and an priceless collections of memories.

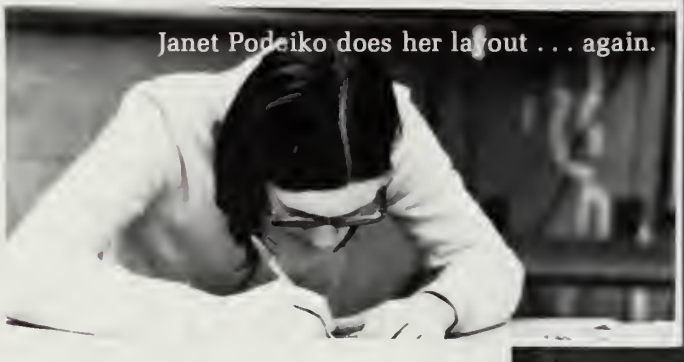
And they said it was going to be easy

Yearbook Staff: Jason Constantino, Peter Hamilton, Jim Grandfield, Steve Medeiros, Dana Green, Brenda George, Karyl Lew, Dave Linehan, Carol Janeway, Jeanne Foy, Kim Kelly, Laurie Pizzano, Janet Pendergast, Marie Gardner, June Weaver, Shawn Malloy not photographed: Jim Kreitman, John Keelan, Janet Podeiko, Lisa Mackertich, Joe Curran, Diane Kelley



Janet Podeiko does her layout . . . again.

In my opinion, the purpose of a yearbook is not to merely display pictures and list names. Instead, it should be used effectively to summarize an important period of our lives. This is easier said than done because it is impossible to collect three vital years and cram them into 216 11-8½" pages. With this goal in mind, we take great care to choose a motley of pictures, copy, and themes to represent all the conflicting emotions, situations, and impressions that we have experienced throughout our high school years. Hopefully, the North Star will serve as a memorable keepsake and an abstract reference.

— Karyl Lew

Our fearless leader bares all

People very rarely realize the time, effort and money needed to make a successful yearbook.

In June of our Junior year the editors are faced with enormous task of creating a yearbook beginning from nothing but an idea; pictures, layouts, and copy soon become a reality. Too often people criticize the book, not fully realizing all of the work behind the scenes.

Our staff is comprised of a cross-section of the class. As you glance through the book a definite pattern prevails, yet the varied personalities who contributed to the book provide for a unique touch.

Brenda George

IS YOUR INSURANCE MAN A SECRET AGENT?

You know what we mean. A guy you hardly know. A guy who works for a cold, impersonal outfit in some faraway city.

How could you know him? He doesn't have time to visit his clients (which is rather mysterious considering he never seems to be in his office when you have a claim). That's a secret agent.

But when your agent is one of the Big "I" Guys, you do know him and he knows you. Because instead of bieng "like a good neighbor," he is your neighbor-living and working right in our town.

He doesn't work for a company. He works for you. He helps you choose the right policy from the right company at the right price. And he's always available with answers, advice and service on your claims.

So if you're tired of doing business with a secret agent, get to know the Big "I" Guys at your local Independent Insurance Agency.

The Northstar has long been a guide for sailors at sea. It has helped them to steer a straight course through the vast empty spaces on which they sail.

The Northstar is also our guide. It's something we look to for direction. Most times we are confused about which way to turn but somehow we manage to break through those walls of indecision.

The Northstar, as a book, and an image represents each one of us; young and fresh, against the world, eager to take the challenge.

The Northstar shows where we have been and what we have done up to the present. But, still there lies before us years and many miles of empty space. Everything that we have done here as a class and as individuals has been captured.

— David Linehan
